PREFACE

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CLASS OF 1898 :

I herewith submit the Third Report of the Class, and sincerely trust that it will meet with your hearty interest and approval. I had hoped that the Report would be completed and in your hands before you journeyed to Cambridge for that wonderful Quindecennial celebration, but my hopes were blasted and the work delayed by that ever-present band of procrastinators who are the bane of every Class Secretary, but who finally yield and send in their "lives" after repeated personal letters, telephone communications or telegrams. Incidentally I might add that these men should be made to realize that their dilatory actions try the patience and temper of the Class Secretary and place an added strain on the class funds. Truthfully, however, I must confess that the preparation of this Report has given me the deepest satisfaction and pleasure. I have done my best to make you all say, in your own way, what you have accomplished during the past fifteen years. I have striven hard to make some of you realize that membership in the Class of '98 really means something. I have striven harder to draw that bond of comradeship just a little tighter so that we may all be better '98 men, better Harvard men. If I have succeeded at all in my efforts, I shall be happy.

Since the publication of the Second Report, July, 1907, it is my sad duty to record the death of the following eleven men: Herbert Claude Kahn, Ernest Wilhelm Sutton Pickhardt, Leland Emerson Bristol, Charles Winthrop Cutter, John Butler Swann, John Flint, Waldemar Koch, Henry Wood Fowler, Howard Curry Mason, Newell Cheever Cook, Louis Henry Martin.

In the preparation of this Report I have endeavored to record the names of all men who appear in the Quinquennial Catalogue as '98 men; this in order to make my records conform with those of the University. Some of these men received their degrees with the Class, but as their affiliations are with other classes I have merely recorded their statistics. I have also included the names of those who, according to the Harvard University Directory, appear to have had any real connection with the Class. These men I have written to, and from most of them have received replies in which they state that they desire to keep up their affiliations with '98.

The list of "lost" seems unusually large, but please note that only six of these are degree holders, and the balance socially connected. I am very anxious to gather these "lost men" back into the fold, so please help me find them.

I desire particularly to call your attention to the report of the Class Treasurer. That it is not more complete is entirely my fault, for not until the day before he sailed for Europe did I notify Woodward that a statement was due. If you will take the trouble to turn to the statements published in the two previous Reports (May, 1901, and June, 1907), you will find that the fund has increased from $4254.50 in 1901, $9135.55 in 1907, to $10,652.53, June 1, 1913. This has been accomplished through the deep interest, diligence and judicious management of the fund by your Treasurer, and I venture to say that there are very few classes, if any, that can show a financial statement superior to that of '98. Woodward deserves the heartiest thanks and congratulations of the Class.

To those of you who answer my communications promptly and keep me informed as to what you or some other member of the Class is doing, I render due homage and offer my humble thanks. To all, I offer hearty greetings.

In closing I desire to express my deep sense of obligation to Mr. William R. Thayer for his continued interest in the Class and for many helpful suggestions. To the Alumni office and its staff I am also deeply indebted, for without their courteous treatment and supervision the publication of this Report would have proved a very difficult task.

Faithfully yours

BARTLETT HARDING HAYES

Class Secretary

THE DECENNIAL

'Twas a glorious celebration, and the outcome of the baseball game and the boat race made it all the more successful. Every one seemed to have a good time, and never before did the Class get together so well. Incidentally a new record has been made for attendance at a decennial dinner, '98 turning out over two hundred and fifty men. The celebration started in at the Yale baseball game at Cambridge, and the Class had one whole section, which was filled with members and their wives or future wives. On Monday, the 22d, about two hundred and twenty-five men turned up at the Point of Pines. The morning was given over to indoor baseball games, followed by a most wonderful clambake and later in the day by a swim in the ocean. Special tights, one leg blue and the other white (the Class colors), embellished with the Class numerals, were distributed among the men. Shortly after the clambake an unfortunate fire occurred in a small house on the marshes, and two families were burned out and one little girl fatally burned. On hearing of this accident a fund was started among a few of the men and $139 collected in a very few minutes. This was later divided between the two unfortunate families. The return to Boston was made by steamboat, and we all had a glorious sail. One very pleasant feature of the day was the presence of the double quartet from the Varsity Glee Club, all 1908 men, and their fine singing was deeply appreciated by every one. The Class Dinner was held at the Hotel Somerset in the evening, with Woodward presiding. Speeches were made by W. E. Dorman, R. S. Goodrich, Dr. A. H. Rice and Gerish Newell. Dalton, Wadsworth, Valentine and Butler sang the songs. Toward the close of the dinner word was received that Governor Willson of Kentucky was stopping at the hotel. A committee of four men was appointed to call on him and persuade him to say a few words to the Class. This he gladly consented to do, and we were fortunate enough to have him as our guest during the remainder of the evening. Tuesday morning the Class assembled at Hotel Victoria and proceeded from there in automobiles to the Brookline Country Club. An "indoor baseball" tournament was immediately started with sixteen teams, and two rounds were played, when a halt was called for lunch. The lunch, as well as the afternoon, was given over largely to competition with the Class of 1883, who were celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary at the Country Club. A committee of three, with Graydon as speaker, forced their way into the '83 lunch-room, and in behalf of '98 presented '83 with a rolling armchair, a token of esteem and solicitude from the younger to the older class. Not to be outdone, '83, too, made an invasion on the '98 precincts, and through their speakers, C. S. Hamlin and Belshaw, we were presented with a cradle and rattle. A golf tournament was then started between the two classes and also a tennis tournament, both of which were won by '98. The semi-finals and finals of the indoor baseball tournament were completed in the afternoon, the victorious team being the "Steam Rollers," captained by L. P. Marvin, and made up as follows: Hastings, pitcher; Marvin, catcher; Sheafe, 1st b.; Carleton, 2d b.; Burgess, 3d b.; Stillman, s.s.; D. M. Goodrich, l.f.; Rust, c.f.; Wood, r.f. Later in the afternoon a nine inning game with the regular ball was played between the married and unmarried men and, of course, was won by the married men, 10-3. The two teams were made up as follows: Married—Hayes, pitcher; Slade, catcher; Sheafe, 1st b.; Rand, 2d b.; Burgess, 3d b.; Foster, s.s.; Edmunds, l.f.; Graydon and Dorr, c.f.; Moulton and Chipman, r.f. Single men—Vineent, pitcher; R. M. P. Brown, catcher; Bowie, 1st b.; Abbott, 2d b.; Holmes, 3d b.; McVey, s.s.; Stone, l.f.; Marvin, c.f.; Hall, r.f. In the evening over two hundred men sat down to an informal dinner, at which Graydon acted as toast-master. With a few facetious remarks he distributed small silver cups to the members of the winning indoor baseball nine and also one to R. S. Goodrich for coming to the Decennial from the farthest distance, Phoenix, Ariz. The following awards were also made: to C. C. Stillman, fat man, a pair of corsets with which to keep in shape; to W. E. Weaver, the man with the largest family (all boys), a toy cow, to keep the children strongly nourished; to J. W. Graydon, a small water-wagon; to H. D. Bushnell, the most bald-headed man, a wig; to C. N. Smith, the man with the smallest chest development, a pair of breast shields. On Commencement Day the Class held its spread in Holden Chapel, and there again over two hundred members turned up. Thursday we had a special car at the boat race, and it is not necessary to recall what we saw there. The official celebration ended on the night of the race, but your Secretary has been told that a number of the '98 warriors, enthusiastic, and bubbling over with the spirits and success of the Decennial, marched on to New York and there took part in the final obsequies over the little Yale heroes.

The first three of these fifteen years since 1898 were spent at Columbia law school, where I received the degree of LL.B. in 1901. The next year and a half were spent at home in Washington, with a desk in the law offices of Birney and Woodard and a side course, afternoons, at the George Washington (then Columbian) law school, from which I received the LL.M. degree in 1902. On January 1, 1903, having in the meanwhile become engaged and seeing no near prospect of making a living for two from the general practice of law in Washington, I took an editorial position on the staff of the Lawyers Coöperative Publishing Company of Rochester, N. Y. I managed to save enough by the spring of 1904 to furnish a modest home and was married then. Early in 1906 an opportunity was offered to enter the patent law offices of my father-in-law's firm, Howson and Howson. Since then I have been actively engaged in the soliciting of patents and the practice of patent law in New York City. I have four children, and live the really pleasant life of a commuter from Plainfield, N. J. I have written various legal synopses appearing as editorial notes in the lawyers' reports, annotated.

Address (home) South Lincoln, Mass.
(business) 84 State St., Boston, Mass.

The February following graduation I left for Lewiston, Idaho, with my brother John to look after various interests in which our family had large investments. For a while there was great activity in that section and it looked as if it would become a railroad centre, but after a year things slackened up. My brother then went away and I remained, but my time has since been divided, looking after other interests in Portland and Spokane, with much time in Boston.

I passed my bar examination in the winter of 1900, but did not take up active practice until the fall of 1901. I then entered the office of Melvin O. After leaving college I went to the Harvard Law School for one half year, and the following summer went into the office of Oliver Ames and Sons, North Easton, where I stayed for two years. After that I went into the office of the Ames Estate, 96 Ames Building, Boston, where I have had offices ever since. In 1905 I started my place in North Easton, and have lived there intermittently ever since, occasionally going to Boston for two or three months in the winter. I am very much interested in farming, and breed Guernsey cattle and horses on this place. After leaving college I was very much interested in copper mining, and used to make frequent trips to the West. Since then I have gone into the fertilizer business, and am on the executive committee of the American Agricultural Chemical Company. I am also interested in several power companies in the West, and am a director in the Western Power Company; director of the Old Colony Trust Company; vice-president of the North Easton Savings Bank; director of the First National Bank of Easton; director and on the executive committee of the American Agricultural Chemical Company; trustee of the Boston Women's Free Hospital; trustee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society; member of the executive committee of the American Guernsey Cattle Club. I never really left Harvard. When still an undergraduate I held office as an assistant in botany. In 1898 I was appointed, by the President and Fellows of Harvard College, assistant director of the Botanic Garden. I held this position without interruption until August 1, 1909, when, on the resignation of Professor George Lincoln Goodale, I was appointed director without limit of time. In 1899 (at this time I was studying for a master of arts degree in the Graduate School) I was appointed instructor and continued to hold that position until 1910 when, after having conducted a full course in Botany 5, I found teaching a severe and irresistible drain on time which I was anxious to devote to research and original investigations. Out of thirty-eight years of terrestrial existence I have served Harvard fifteen. About the year 1903 I entered the factories of the Oliver Ames and Sons Corporation at North Easton, Mass., where for over one hundred years the best shovels in the world have been made, to learn the business. I went to work at seven A. M. and quit at six P. M. daily. I progressed from one department to another, remaining in each long enough to acquire sufficient skill and endurance to turn out an average day's work. When the proper time came I was given command of the entire plant for two weeks, serving as assistant superintendent. I never felt that the increased pay which characterized this position of responsibility was so well earned as the money which I drew from actual manufacture. From the factories I passed to my chosen field of study again, having fulfilled a tradition of my family and having gained a knowledge of factory life which amply repaid me for the sweat of my brow. Shortly after the American occupation of the Philippine Islands I was invited by the government laboratories at Manila to undertake the critical study of Philippine orchids. I began serious investigations in 1905, after having familiarized myself with the work of distinguished predecessors through visits to the museums of Europe where rich collections are treasured. The results of my labors have been published in scientific periodicals and in my books. Up to the present time (January, 1913) I have described more than two hundred new species of orchids from the Philippines, and have added substantially to our knowledge of the rich flora of those islands. Aside from my work for the laboratories at Manila I have done similar work for many institutions in Mexico, the United States and Canada. Among the offices of honor or trust which I have held few merit mention. Naturally of a retiring disposition, I have avoided offices in the numerous societies with which I have become identified. Political aspirations have never disturbed my equilibrium, but as chairman of the school committee of Easton I have done public service. In the realms of finance I have been president or director of more than one company which has struggled for a while and then been lost, but in successful ventures, as in my clubs, I have been contented with obscurity. A student's life is rarely varied. The routine work of one day is much like that of another. Although fifteen years have passed since the Class of 1898 went out from Harvard, my work, my activities and my recreations are different from those of 1898 simply in this; that they show more maturity in mental and physical ability. I have written numerous articles in scientific books, the more important being Orchidaceae Halconenses, Notes on Philippine Orchids with Descriptions of New Species (I-V, Philippine Journal of Science); New Species of Acoridium (Proceedings of the Biological Society of Washington); Revision of the Orchidaceae in Gray's New Manual of Botany; articles on orchids for Bailey's Cyclopedia of American Horticulture; Orchidaceae, a work, now consisting of four volumes, issued from my own laboratory. Member: American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Society of American Naturalists, Boston Society of Natural History, Association Internationale des Botanistes, American Fern Society, Sullivant Moss Society, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Biological Society of Washington, New England Botanical Club, American Breeders Association, American Forestry Association, Linnæan Society of London, New York Academy of Sciences, Algonquin Club, Boston Art Club, Boston Athletic Association, Massachusetts Automobile Club.

The activities in which I have been engaged are of too small distinction to be denominated anything but commonplace. An effort to do the duty at hand, to serve my family and my employers really sums it up. My first job was with Tucker, Anthony and Company, bankers, in Boston, and I have been with them ever since, being now in charge of the customers' room. My wife and I are getting the very keenest pleasure in our one little girl, Jean, who is now two and a half years old.

I think the above will answer the purposes for the present for the class report, as since 1905 I have continuously practised law at 27 William Street, without honor or dishonor that would be of interest to the Class of 1898.

PAUL VALENTINE BACON

Born	Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 14, 1876.
Parents	George Andrew, Susan Lyman (Hillman) Bacon.
School	Cambridge Latin School, Cambridge, Mass.

In the summer of 1897, having finished the work required for my degree, I left college and went west to travel for Allyn and Bacon, but returned in June to take my degree with the class. In the summer of 1900 I took graduate work at the University of Wisconsin; the winter of 1900-1901 I spent in Paris studying at the Sorbonne; the following summer I travelled on the Continent and in Sicily. In 1904 I spent some time at the Sorbonne again, but passed the winter in Florence studying Italian. In the spring I joined the American Classical School at Rome and went to Greece with a small party from the school. A donkey trip through the Peloponnesus was the most unique feature of the trip. The following summer I travelled in Germany and the British Isles. Shortly after my return I edited Paul Heyse's L'Arrabbiata, and in 1907 I published a German grammar. In the same year I was married, and the following fall (1908) we went abroad, spending the winter in Germany and doing the "grand tour" in the spring. In January, 1910, my German Reader, Im Vaterland, appeared. In 1911 and 1912 I studied two semesters at the University of Berlin, and while there was an active member of the Berlin Harvard Club. I visited the Universities of Jena, Marburg, Leipsic, Freiburg, Heidelberg and Bonn as well as many secondary schools to get material for treating the subject of phonetics in my new German Composition, which is to appear in the spring of 1913. By a coincidence interesting to me, we happened to be in Bonn on June 29, 1912, exactly nineteen years after I had tried my finals there in 1893. Upon my return to America in the fall of 1912 I was transferred to the editorial department of Allyn and Bacon, with headquarters in Boston. Books I have written: German Grammar (1907), Im Vaterland (1910), German Composition (1913), Heyse's L'Arrabbiata (edited 1906). Member: Chicago Literary Club, Caxton Club of Chicago, Brothers of the Book (Chicago), Quadrangle Club of Chicago, Harvard Club of Chicago, Harvard Club of Eastern Illinois, American Historical Association, American Political Science Association, Classical Association of the Middle West and South.

Born	Boston, Mass., Dec. 19, 1876.

After ten years of life in Cambridge, four in college, three in the Graduate School and three more as instructor in Latin in Harvard and Radcliffe, I migrated in 1904 to a place that has of late years been achieving considerable notoriety as a sort of paradise among colleges.—Haverford. Six years of service here as associate professor of Greek (which in this case means being the whole Greek department) was followed in 1910-1911 by a sabbatical year of absence. With the summer vacation periods before and after, this gave a chance for sixteen months of travel and study in Europe. As the trip was made en famille and on half pay, it also afforded, in addition to the travel and study, the somewhat unusual experience of keeping house in several different countries of Europe, one of the most interesting courses imaginable in domestic finance, and mighty good fun withal. Three months were spent in Germany, mostly at Göttingen; four in Italy, where I did some research work in several old libraries; six in Greece, with headquarters at Athens; and the second summer in Switzerland. Three epidemics, scarlet fever, cholera, meningitis, in as many different cities, we fortunately passed through unscathed. Both at Rome and at Athens I made use of the Harvard man's privilege of membership in the American Schools of Classical Studies in those cities. And now at home once more, my chief task consists in trying to show a part of young America how much it owes to its intellectual forefathers and incidentally how to get living Greek into our more or less dead English. Four of my students since I have been at Haverford have won Rhodes scholarships; several times as many have followed a well-beaten track from Haverford to Harvard for graduate study. As for "offices of honor and trust," I may report that in 1908-1909 I served as vice-president, and the next year as president, of the Philadelphia Classical Club, a flourishing and long-standing organization of men from several professions who are interested in the classics. Since 1911 I have been treasurer of the Pennsylvania Society of the Archaeological Institute of America. Books, articles or plays which I have written or translated: De Comicis Graecis litterarum indicibus (The Greek Comic Poets as Literary Critics); Harvard Studies in Classical Philology, XV; Slang, Ancient and Modern (Classical Weekly, 1909); Ancient Ways in Modern Greece (American Journal of Archaeology, 1912); A Vase Fragment from Vari (American Journal of Archaeology, 1913); and various briefer articles in the Classical Review, Classical Weekly, Proceedings of the American Philological Association, and elsewhere. Member: American Philological Association, Philadelphia Classical Club, Pennsylvania Society of the Archaeological Institute of America, Classical Association of the Atlantic States.

County. In 1909 I became interested in the Boston News Bureau and the Wall Street Journal. There is still some doubt whether the gap left in the Boston bar by this defection will ever be satisfactorily filled. In 1911 I was appointed chairman of the directors of the port of Boston. (business) Chase Motor Truck Company, Syracuse, N. Y.*

Without having achieved either fame or notoriety since leaving college, a record of my life will make rather prosaic reading. After two years in the printing business in Syracuse I travelled in the South. Early in 1901 I went to west Texas, and spent considerable time in cattle ranching on the Staked Plains. This was followed by a horseback trip through west Texas and southeastern New Mexico. Meanwhile I made a study of the livestock industry and certain irrigation projects and did a little writing for the magazines. Later I worked for over three years for Swift and Company at the Union Stock Yards in Chicago. In the autumn of 1904 I obtained a leave of absence and went to the Southwest to do a little hunting and also to visit certain unique and strange places in Arizona and New Mexico, including the ruins of the cliff and cave dwellings, some Indian pueblos, the petrified forests, etc. I left Swift and Company in 1905 to go with a well-known advertising agency in New York City. In 1908 I travelled in Europe, and in the summer of 1911 I gave up my work in New York, returned to Syracuse and accepted a position as advertising manager for the Chase Motor Truck Company, with which company I am still. I keep in very little touch with college affairs, but am always interested to note the varied achievements of Harvard men in all walks of life. Articles which I have written: The Economics of Cattle Ranching in the Southwest (Review of Reviews, September, 1901), Reclaiming the Arid Southwest (Forum, May, 1902), The Game of the Staked Plains (Outing, January, 1902), Climbing Sunset Mountain (Overland Monthly, February, 1908), etc. Member: University Club of Syracuse.

CLASS OF 1898 — THIRD REPORT

Business	Teacher.
Address	(home) 88 North St., Salem, Mass. (business) Hackley Lower School, Tarrytown, N. Y.

After some preliminary experiences, more or less pleasant, I joined the teaching force at the Hackley School, Tarrytown, N. Y., where I have been for the past eight years. When a small boy asks me, "What do you think I'll be when I grow up?" I generally reply, "A teacher." Now usually this has never occurred to the small boy, whose ambitions range from a soda-water clerk to a piano player in a moving-picture show. After a moment's pause the reply usually is, "I don't know but a teacher has a pretty easy time. Look at the long vacations!" If any member of the Class of 1898 believes this, I would advise a trial. It is not easy work, but it is pleasant work, and you have the satisfaction of knowing that you are doing something to make the world a better and happier place to live in; but you will never be rich in a money sense. The long vacations have given me the opportunity to travel over Europe and this country. For some reason I have never met the right girl, but I am not discouraged. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

For five years after graduation I was in the real estate business. Early in 1904 I became interested in the phosphate mining business, and am treasurer and general manager of the International Phosphate Company, whose plant is in Florida. This company is not, as its name signifies, world-wide and world-famous, but is about the size of a very small teapot. In 1911 I became associated as a partner with E. F. Pitman in the investment business, and am helping him serve to the public digestible securities. The directors of the First National Bank of Winchendon, being hard up for an ornamental figurehead for vice-president, selected me, and I am living up to their expectations. I am also treasurer of the Fibre Finishing Company, which is in the incipient stage. As yet I haven't been able to find a girl who will have me.

On graduating from Harvard I entered the office of the British Columbia Mills Timber and Trading Company (Vancouver, British Columbia), of which my father was assistant general manager, as junior clerk. After my father's death on November 14, 1906, I was appointed manager of the car sales department and director in 1910. Since the death of my mother on January 12, 1911, I have had less time to devote to the lumber business, and particularly since returning last July from a trip around the world. Accordingly I have just resigned my position as car sales manager of the British Columbia Mills Timber and Trading Company and have been elected vice-president of the British America Trust Company, Limited, through which I expect to handle my varied interests in the province of British Columbia. I still hold my directorship, however, in the British Columbia Mills Timber and Trading Company, and have a considerable interest in that company as well as in the progress of the lumber industry in the West. I am also a director in a number of other concerns in Vancouver. My spare time is devoted to golf as my chief recreation, motoring as a pleasure and music as a hobby. I also take some part in the usual charitable and philanthropic work associated with a good-sized and growing city such as Vancouver. Member: Vancouver Club, Union Club of British Columbia, Victoria Club, Jericho Country Club, British Columbia Golf Club, Vancouver Lawn Tennis Club, Vancouver Cricket Club, Vancouver Hockey Club, Vancouver Rowing Club, Connaught Skating Club, Canadian Club, Vancouver Choral and Orchestral Society, British Columbia Fine Arts Society, Vancouver Automobile Club.

I then returned to New Orleans, La., where, after a study of Louisiana law, I was admitted to the Louisiana bar in November, 1901. I followed law as a profession until the year 1905, when, upon receiving a commission as notary public, I divided my time between the legal and notarial professions. In January, 1913, I formed a partnership with

Edward M. Robbert, under the firm name of Beer and Robbert, and said firm is now engaged in both legal and notarial professions. I am at present a director in the board of managers of the Touro Infirmary and the Hebrew Benevolent Association, of New Orleans, La. For two years and a half after reaching Japan I was in Tottori studying the language, but in March, 1904, I went to Kyoto to teach English in Doshisha College. In the fall of 1904 I was located in Okayama, where I was engaged in general missionary work. Since 1906 I have been engaged in missionary work in Tottori, Japan. The work consists of touring the country, teaching English, the Bible and singing at home, and teaching English at the Prefectural Middle School and Commercial School. I have a kindergarten for Japanese children, with forty children enrolled, and there are three Japanese evangelists working with me. I have written various articles for the Mission News, published in Kobe, Japan. Member: Harvard Club of Japan.

Since leaving college I have lived continuously in Worcester. I married, in the fall of 1898, Edith Jourdan. With our three little girls we have spent the recent years very pleasantly and quietly both in Worcester and at Madison, Conn., where we spend our summers. I have not interested myself in public life, not even as much as one ought, but I have kept up my interest in track athletics by being associated both as manager of the games and as referee of the annual track and field meeting of the New England colleges. I have not participated actively in any branch of athletics. My life has not been one to interest other members of the class, but it has been very pleasant and happy. After I graduated I studied naval architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for two years. I then went to San Francisco and worked for two years in the draughting room and shipyard of the Union Iron Works.

Some time after my return to Boston I gave up my profession as being too unremunerative. I went into the brokerage business and was for some time manager of the Boston office of a New York stock exchange house. On the dissolution of the firm I became connected with Sargent and Fairchild, members of the Boston Stock Exchange, and had a desk in their office until the dissolution of that firm. Since that time I have been interested in various projects, such as the organization of the Harvard Varsity Club, and was its treasurer for the first two years of its existence; the Marine Museum, of which I am secretary and treasurer; and have held other somewhat onerous but entirely unremunerative offices in various organizations. In February, 1912, I was elected secretary of the executive committee and of the board of directors of the Boston Opera Company, which position I still fill. Member: Tennis and Racquet Club, Somerset Club, Myopia Hunt Club, Nahant Club, Massachusetts Fish and Game Protective Association, Massachusetts Military Historical Society, Harvard Club of New York, Marine Museum, Nahant Dory Club.

Business	Architecture.
Address	(home) 83 Brattle St., Cambridge, Mass. (business) 9 Park St., Boston, Mass.

After graduating in 1898 I was appointed assistant to the chief engineer of the Massachusetts highway commission, and remained in that office for about three years, gaining an intimate knowledge of the earlier planning and development of the state highway system, for which Massachusetts is now noted. Having been educated for architecture, however, rather than for engineering, I resigned my position and entered the Harvard Graduate School in 1901, to study advanced architecture. After several months so spent, I worked in the offices of Boston architects until the fall of 1903, when with Mr. Louis C. Newhall, a Tech. man of considerable practical architectural experience, I formed a partnership, under the firm name of Newhall and Blevins, with offices at 9 Park Street, Boston. This partnership still continues, and barring a few months spent abroad in 1905-1906. I have devoted my energies to building up a rather successful and interesting practice, with a little time for club life and outdoor sports, of which I am especially fond. These combined demands on my time and efforts are responsible, no doubt, for my still being a bachelor, and I feel it my duty to so inform my classmates, that they may not imagine me physically or mentally deficient, or perhaps a confirmed woman-hater. In connection with business, I am trustee of several real estate trusts, and I have served as professional adviser to some public commissions. I am also a director in the Associated Charities. Member: Harvard Club, Colonial Club, Boston City Club, Oakley Country Club, Vesper Country Club, Cambridge Club, Economy Club, Boston Society of Architects, American Institute of Architects.

After leaving college I became a reporter for Chicago newspapers; made a specialty of stock market reports. A few years later, when I was twenty-six years old, I went to New York, first having purchased a seat upon the Exchange, in which I had assistance from my father. A relative of mine was a member of the firm of Lepwatz, Dupee and Company, the largest brokerage house in Chicago. Through them I managed to do a considerable business. But they retired from business after the panic of 1901, and as I thought I had made sufficient money, I sold my seat on the Exchange shortly afterwards. Since that time I have done nothing except to look after my own and my father's interests. Member: Standard Club of Chicago, Harvard Club of Chicago.

My life has been quite devoid of the meteoric or sensational. After graduation I taught for a time in Texas and Oklahoma, and later entered the employ of Ginn and Company, the educational publishers, doing literary work on foreign-language and other text-books. Five years ago (1908) I took a position with the De Vinne Press in New York in a somewhat similar capacity, and have since been with that house and with the press of Charles Scribner's Sons. Member: Harvard Club of New Jersey, National Conservation Association.

From the year of graduation until 1910 I was on newspapers in Baltimore, Washington, Syracuse, N. Y., Columbus, Ohio, and Akron, Ohio. Two of those years I also published a small daily paper in Annapolis, Md. In 1910 I took up publicity work for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, Baltimore, a surety and casualty insurance company, and am now superintendent of advertising and development. But merely an obscure person, unknown to clubs, societies, automobile salesmen, public office or the editor of Who's Who, I have no footnotes to my chronology,—unless somebody wishes to know how to run the furnace or put down carpets.

After two years in business I returned to the Harvard Law School, graduating from there in 1903. In 1904 I was admitted to the bar in Pittsburgh, and since then have been devoting myself to the profession of law. During the last three years I have taken a rather active part in political, civic and charitable work in Pittsburgh. In connection with the Associated Charities of Pittsburgh, I have given considerable attention to procuring more adequate laws against family desertion as well as better enforcement of the laws we already have. The Keystone party of Pennsylvania has furnished an opportunity for a little rather effective political work; but I have never run for office. These and similar efforts have been a source of considerable pleasure in the past, and appearances now are that there will be much of such work in the future. Member: Harvard Club of Western Pennsylvania.

Leland Emerson Bristol

Born	Omaha, Neb., Sept. 24, 1875.
Parents	Cicero Lathrop, Mary Jane (Weeks) Bristol.
School	Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.
Years in College	1894-1898.
Degrees	A.B., 1898; LL.B., 1901 (1904).
Married	Alice (Pemberton) Calef, Haverhill, Mass., Dec. 30, 1907.
Children	Donald, 1908.
Died	Portland, Ore., Aug. 2, 1910.

Leland Emerson Bristol was prepared for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, and entered Harvard with the Class of 1898, with which he was graduated with the degree of A.B. During his undergraduate days he was a member of the Harvard Whist Club and of Massachusetts Gamma Chapter, Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity. The years 1898-1901 he spent at the Harvard Law School,—years which he has written were “unmarked by anything except hard work, and a gradual decline in health which the succeeding years failed fully to rehabilitate." The winters of 1902 and 1903 he spent with relatives in Columbia, Mo., doing little real work, in the hope of rebuilding his health. The next year he practised law in the office of Beardsley, Gregory and Kirshner in Kansas City, and in 1904-1905 he returned to the Law School for a year of post-graduate work with a view to fitting himself to teach law. His health remained unsatisfactory, and at the suggestion of his physician he went west for a year of ranch life, making his residence at Babb, Mont., at the foot of the Rocky Mountains. The change was beneficial to him, and in 1907 he felt so restored in health that he accepted an assistant professorship of law at the University of Missouri. In 1907 he married Miss Alice Pemberton Calef, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Garland Calef of Haverhill, Mass. His wife returned with him to Columbia, where he still held his assistant professorship. The arduous work of teaching affected Bristol's health unfavorably, so much so that in the fall of 1908 he found it necessary to give up his position at the Law School and seek employment which would permit of his being out of doors as much as possible. He accordingly went to Seattle, Wash., where he started a real estate business. His boy, christened Donald, was born that fall. The following summer Bristol became interested in fruit culture, and went into that business at Underwood, Wash. While waiting for his fruit trees to yield he taught school. In the summer of 1910 he was stricken with appendicitis and underwent an operation at the hospital at Portland, Ore. He was recovering from the operation when pneumonia set in and caused his death, August 2, 1910.

Those who were Bristol's friends in college, and to whom the news of his death, separated from them as he was by a continent, came with the shock of absolute unexpectedness, feel themselves richer by his friendship and by his example of devotion and courage. He put himself through Andover, Harvard College and Harvard Law School practically unaided and by dint of earnest and conscientious effort; finding time, notwithstanding the demand made upon him by the necessity of pursuing some remunerative employment, to avail himself of the social side of college life and to do work of such quality as to earn him a degree with distinction. The strain of the seven years of college and Law School unhappily impaired his constitution at a time when he needed the best of health to begin his life's work, and to such an extent finally that he was forced to give up his chosen profession and seek out-of-door employment. But if his health was impaired, his courage was not. Undaunted by a setback which would have utterly dismayed a man of less grit and perseverance, he had made a start in a line of work with which he was unfamiliar when he was stricken by the illness which caused his death. The quiet self-reliance and ambition and courage that Bristol revealed to those who knew him most intimately are the attributes of real heroism.

In the fall of 1898 I entered the New York Law School, from which I was graduated in 1900. For two years and a half thereafter clerking in various law offices of New York City occupied my time. In April, 1903, I entered the legal department of the South Penn Oil Company at Pittsburgh. While in Pittsburgh it was a pleasure and a valuable experience to be associated with the Harvard Club of Western Pennsylvania, which has given a fair account of itself in recent years. In February, 1912, I left Pittsburgh, bringing my family to Montclair, N. J. There I occupied the position of general counsel of the former Standard Oil pipe lines from Indiana to the seaboard connection, my office being at 26 Broadway, New York. The work of reconstruction under the decree of dissolution is interesting, and, keeping abreast of modern notions as to corporations, their employees, the public, etc., most congenial. then went to France, and after passing the examinations for the Ecole des Beaux Arts. I made my residence in Paris, working there and following the course of architecture as prescribed by the Beaux Arts under the direction of Mr. Laloux's atelier. After graduation I continued my studies in the Law School, and entered the law office of Matthews and Thompson, where I remained for over two years, when I went into practice for myself, continuing ever since, and experiencing periodical jolts, without being able to determine yet whether they have set me forward or backward. I have held nothing in the way of an office except the one I try to keep the rent paid for, but have often been urged to run for hog reeve, keeper of the town pound, etc. I believe I did serve for three years on the school committee of the town of Belmont, Mass. I have the honor to be a justice of the peace, this being cheaper than being a notary, who has to buy an official seal. I have hopes, however, of getting a comfortable job some day soon, as the government is now going the way I have been urging it to go in private, but in vain, for some time.

Just before graduation I formed a partnership with my two brothers under the firm name of the Greendale Chemical and Electric Lighting Company. This company obtained a franchise to supply electricity to the town of Needham for light and power purposes. In 1903 this company sold its rights and property, equipment, etc., to the Boston Edison Company, and I took a position with them. In 1905 I was appointed assistant superintendent of the isolated light and power department. In 1906 I married Katherine E. Bailey of Dedham, Mass. On New Year's day, 1908, a boy arrived (you see he started the New Year right). In June, 1910, I accepted the position of general manager of the J. G. and B. S. Ferguson Company. Shortly afterwards this company sold its interests to the General Baking Company of New York, and I accepted the position, which I hold at present, of assistant district manager of the General Vehicle Company, electric truck manufacturers. On Halloween night, 1910, a little sister came to keep our New Year boy company. Member: Masons, including Commandery and Shrine, Electric Motor Car Club of Boston. In the fall after graduation I decided to enter the employ of Carter, Rice and Company, wholesale paper dealers, a firm of which my father is treasurer and half owner. Out of deference to the paternal idea. I was given plenty of opportunity to become familiar with the lower rounds of the ladder. For two years I was shifted from one stock department to another in order that I might become familiar with the different kinds of goods carried. This experience was finally terminated with a ten weeks' sojourn in Holyoke, where I studied paper manufacturing. Beginning in 1900, I served five years in the correspondence and order department. In 1905 I went on the road as travelling salesman. The following year my work was again in Boston. I was made manager of the city salesmen, and am at present occupying this position. Outside of business I derived much benefit from two European trips. From 1904 to 1907 I served in the First Corp of Cadets. About this same time I was on the executive committee of the Newton Club. In 1910 I was elected secretary of the New England Paper Jobbers Association. In 1906 I was married. I have two children, a son of five years and a small daughter of two years. They are both interesting subjects for discussion, but probably such a narrative really belongs to future class histories. Member: Newton Club, Neighborhood Club of West Newton, Harvard Club of Boston, Boston Paper Trade Association.

I had planned to enter the employ of the Carter's Ink Company in the fall of 1899, after a summer's trip with George Metcalf in Europe. Metcalf saw fit to break his leg in June, just prior to his Law School exams., and by following his example in September I postponed my business debut until the first of 1900. Nothing spectacular has happened since. By the inexorable operation of family seniority, I have been president of the Ink Company for some years, and am also a director of the Central Trust Company of Cambridge. A considerable assortment of activities in addition to my business has kept my nose pretty close to the grindstone. I have been interested chiefly in sex education and in the work of my fraternity (Theta Delta Chi) and of my church (Swedenborgian), having held various offices in the local, state and national organizations. Occasionally my business or church work affords me an excuse to travel in the United States, Canada or Europe. Within a few days after graduation I was at a desk in a fire insurance company's head office in New York City, and in due course was ground through the clerical mill, becoming an inspector of the properties insured and then a special agent, having supervisory jurisdiction over agents and losses in a given territory. This last work required constant travelling for several years to towns large and small, good and bad, throughout New England and the middle Atlantic states. After the novelty wore off such travelling became tiresome, and my only compensation (besides salary) was the opportunity to run in on my college friends living from Maine to farthest Pittsburgh. In due course I was taken into the office of the Commonwealth Insurance Company of New York as secretary, and continued as such until, following the custom of the times, that company came under the control of a greater insurance corporation, the North British and Mercantile of London, of which I became assistant secretary. I now have management, as general agent, of the company's agencies and business in the western states. On occasional trips from New York I can again look up my scattered friends living in that great country from Chicago to the Dakotas and to Oklahoma. In the old business of fire insurance, with its very many present-day problems, I have found most congenial work. Except for the home hours spent with my wife and two daughters it has claimed all my time and thought, leaving scant opportunity for development of outside interests. Member: Drug and Chemical Club of New York City, Insurance Society of New York.

My first job after leaving the Scientific School was that of tracer, and later draughtsman, in the engineering office of Mr. E. D. Leavitt, Cambridgeport, Mass. From there, in November, 1899, I went to Philadelphia and worked in the machine shops of the I. P. Morris Company as special machinist's apprentice on construction of heavy machinery. Here I received $5.62 a week at first and later $9.83, and somehow managed to live on it. (I wish I could do it now.) After two years and a half in the shops I went back to Boston for about a year; first, as inspector for my former employer, Mr. Leavitt, until about the time he retired, and for short jobs with the Planters Compress Company and the Crosby Steam Gage and Valve Company. In 1903 I went to Millinocket, Me., as draughtsman for Mr. H. S. Ferguson, then chief engineer of the Great Northern Paper Company, whose mill at Millinocket was the largest paper mill in the country. When I first arrived there, how I wished I was back in good old Boston! But the work was interesting and the pay pretty good. The result was that I stayed eight years. Then, too, I found I could save a little in Millinocket, and after five years had what I thought was enough to get married on. Had I continued in Boston, that happy event might never have come off. In November, 1911, I was appointed to my present position of hydraulic engineer, in charge of the division of water of the Penobscot River at Old Town, Me., in the interest of most of the owners of water power in this vicinity.

Business	Physician and clerk.
Address	23 Mountain Ave., Dorchester, Mass.

After receiving my A.B. my first desire was to get on some pay roll. I tried first to obtain a position to teach chemistry, in which I did much work at Harvard. I found, however, that I could not get a chance to teach through my own efforts. I then tried various agencies, including the Harvard people, but to no avail. Having learned that the United States government was in need of stenographers, and that to obtain such work it was only necessary that the applicant be competent and pass an examination under the civil service, no pull or religious qualifications being necessary, as in the case with teaching, I attended a school, learned stenography and finally secured a position as a government clerk, which I held until I had become financially able to go into the Medical School. I managed to work through the Medical School without forfeiting my life, although my health was much impaired. Since receiving my M.D. degree in 1904 I have been trying to get on my feet again financially, but find it hard work on account of debts incurred at the School and lack of practice. For this reason

I am at present working as a clerk and doing whatever I can in medicine in connection therewith. I have found that I have been greatly handicapped by the fact that the Harvard Medical School does not prepare men to practise medicine, as I supposed, but merely fits them to go into a hospital and learn something about medicine. If I had known this fact or if it had been mentioned in the catalogue of the Medical School, as it should have been, I should not have gone into the Medical School, as the undertaking would have seemed too difficult for me to accomplish.

After leaving college I studied law at the Harvard and Boston University law schools, and was admitted to the bar before completing my course. I started in to try and practise law, and probably would have done so if I had been blessed with clients. As it turned out, after waiting patiently some seven years, I concluded I would never be a Dan Webster; and as I had found experiments in the market from the outside looking in to be rather expensive, I decided to try it from the inside looking out. So I became connected with the stock exchange house of W. C. Langley and Company, and have remained in the brokerage business ever since. The firm I am now with is W. G.

Nickerson and Company, 59 Congress Street. Along with my other work I have done more or less writing for the newspapers on financial subjects. Beyond a summer in Europe in 1900 I have lived here since leaving college, and my life has been quite uneventful. Member: Boston Art Club, Middlesex Bar Association.

My activities outside of school routine have been largely in local social enterprises and in educational associations. I was, until February 15, 1913, president of the Connecticut Association of Classical and High School Teachers. Since last April I have been secretary of the Harvard Club of Connecticut, and through the work connected with this position I have thoroughly enjoyed getting in touch again with Harvard men, including several 1898 fellows. Married	Elsa Marshall, Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 13, 1912.
Business	Civic secretary of the Business Men's Club Company of Cincinnati, Ohio.
Address	(home) 16 Haydock Building, Cincinnati, Ohio. (business) Business Men's Club, Cincinnati, Ohio.

(To begin with I wish most humbly to beg Bartlett H. Hayes and the Class to forgive me for not having returned this report sooner. I did not know that information about me was so important for the records of the Class. The persistency shown by our worthy Secretary in his efforts to secure this report is proof of the great care he is taking to secure correct reports of all the members of the Class. I am very sorry to have given him so much trouble. The past few months have been exceptionally busy ones for me on account of the interest our club has taken in the work of the present legislature of Ohio; in flood relief work; and in changes being made in the city government.)

I entered the law department of the University of Cincinnati immediately after graduating at Harvard. Received degree of LL.B. in 1901, and was admitted to the practice of law in Ohio in the same year. Later admitted to practise law in the Circuit Court of Appeals of the United States. Became connected with the Cincinnati Enquirer as a reporter during my last year in the law school. I was employed by the Cincinnati Enquirer Company from the spring of 1901 until May, 1912, as reporter, photographer, assistant Sunday editor and Sunday editor. I was Sunday editor of the Enquirer for about four years. In April of 1912 I was made civic secretary of the Business Men's Club, an organization with about eighteen hundred members, which is doing a great deal of civic work in Ohio and Cincinnati. I enlisted in Troop C, First Ohio Squadron of Cavalry, when the troop was organized in March, 1911, and received an honorable discharge from the troop after two years' service, in March, 1913. In 1901 and 1902 I helped organize the Automobile Club of Cincinnati and the Ohio State Automobile Association. I was recently made a life honorary member of the Automobile Club. On Friday, December 13, 1912, I married Miss Elsa Marshall, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Pike Marshall. Mr. E. P. Marshall is vice-president of the Union Central Life Insurance Company. When we were children my wife and I were in the same class in the public schools of this city. As Elsa Marshall my wife studied music in Boston, New York, Paris and Germany; and sang in the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston.

Business Clerk: electrical engineering; tutoring.
Address (home) 6907 Euclid Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.
 (business) Care of Electric Controller and Manufacturing Company, 2698 East 79th St., Cleveland, Ohio.

I entered the firm of Blake Brothers and Company, Wall and Nassau Streets, New York City, bankers and brokers, the fall of my senior year, to obtain practical experience. Remaining there something less than a year, I went to California with a business man, a Yale, 1898, man, and made some investigations, at the same time improving my health. After a year's stay in California I came eastward and obtained the agency for an electrical concern of New York, and sold for them in Cleveland, Ohio, where I afterward settled permanently. I was then given the position of a cost accountant and general office man with the Ganner Manufacturing Company, a large concern on the outskirts of Cleveland, leaving there some years later to better my condition. I am now in my fourth year with the Electric Controller and Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of electrical machinery and lifting magnets for the control of modern cranes and steel mills. For about five years I have been doing private tutoring evenings to help accumulate some means. This was always a side line, and some of it was for admission work to Western Reserve University of this city. I have written nothing that has been published except contributions to the Cleveland daily papers, appearing in the editorial columns. Member: Cleveland Cercle Française.

I left college at the end of my junior year, having obtained leave of absence for my senior year, but had to take examinations in one and a half courses before getting my degree. These examinations were taken in the fall of 1898, so that my degree was not obtained until the spring of 1899. My senior year was spent in Europe, from October until March in Berlin studying German, and a couple of months in the spring in Italy studying Italian. The remainder of the year until September was spent travelling from Russia to Belgium, Holland and England. I entered the Columbia Law School in the fall of 1898, and graduated in 1901. Then I began the practice of law in the office of Bowers and Sands, New York, where I remained until April, 1906. On May 1, 1906, the partnership of Roelker, Bailey and Curtis was formed, with offices at 55 and later at 62 William Street, New York. This firm continued until May 1, 1909, when I gave up the practice of law to take up apple growing, general agriculture and forestry, in which I had long been interested. Since 1900 I have had a considerable piece of woodland at Norfolk, Conn., where I have done some planting of white pine and a little forestry, and in the winter of 1908 I bought about four hundred acres of farm land in the southwest corner of Litchfield. I have planted nearly four thousand apple trees, which are expected to be the chief source of income of the farm, although I have a small dairy, and am keeping a large number of young cattle for sale as fresh milch cows. There are at present about one hundred head on the place. I am also managing about eight hundred acres of woodland adjoining the farm. I have been an active member of the Connecticut Pomological Society, and chairman of its publicity committee since February, 1910. I have also been a vice-president of the Connecticut Forestry Association since 1911. I have written: an article in the Columbia Law Review, 1905, on a question of bankruptcy law, which the Supreme Court of the United States subsequently disagreed with; an article in Forestry Quarterly, 1909, on the tariff on evergreen seedlings for forest planting, and a reply to a criticism of this article in a subsequent number; an article on The Practice of Forestry by a Connecticut Landowner, in Proceedings of the Connecticut Forestry Association, 1909; reports, etc., of the Publicity Committee, in Proceedings of the Connecticut Pomological Society 1911 et seq. Member: Harvard Club of New York, University Club of New York, Sanctum Club of Litchfield, Connecticut Forestry Association, Connecticut Pomological Society, Connecticut Dairymen's Association, New York State Fruit Growers Association, Western New York Horticultural Society, Massachusetts Fruit Growers Association.

FRAZIER CURTIS

Born	Manchester, Mass., July 18, 1876.
Parents	Gracey Stevenson, Harriot Sumner Curtis.
School	Hopkinson's School, Boston, Mass.
Years in College	1894-1898.
Degrees	A.B., 1898; A.M., 1899.
Married	Gladys Margaret Raper, Manchester, Mass., June 16, 1909.
Business	Aeronautics.
Address	(home) Care of W. A. Raper, Esq., Battle, Sussex, England. (permanent) 28 Mt. Vernon St., Boston, Mass.

After graduating in 1898 I returned for a master's degree in English in 1899, and also taught a few unfortunate freshmen in English A. The next year I went with a forest service expedition to Puget Sound, accompanied by other perfectly good Harvard men, such as Fisher (R. T.), James

(Henry) the twoth, and James (William, Jr.). The spring of the next year, having heard the call of the wild, I rambled up to Nome, and put in a cheerful summer running a passenger boat along the coast, a pleasing but expensive amusement, followed later by a little prospecting inland. Returning east I put in a winter as cub reporter on the New York Press, and was occasionally paid real money for my services. In the spring I went abroad for a trip through Italy, France and England, and was later joined by a brother, J. F., Warner, 1898, and James H., 1899. In the fall I took the job of private secretary to Colonel J. J. Astor, expecting that I would have to brush the gold dust off my clothes every evening, but it never happened. After a year in my gilded cage, my eyes bothered me so that I had to give up indoor work. The next six years are a money-losing Odyssey, comprising one year cattle ranching in North Dakota, three years shipping Texas cattle to Cuba and two years shipping work horses to western Canada. Quite educational, often amusing and always expensive. Luckily I invested in Saskatoon town lots, and now have very fair rentals from some buildings except when my agents are put to heavy expense. I next went to Seattle and got back into forestry work, which involved the invention and patenting of various tree-measuring instruments. In June, 1909, I was married, and after a trip to my wife's home at Battle, Sussex, where I made a great hit in the rôle of little Lord Fauntleroy, we returned to Seattle for another winter. In the spring of 1910 we took a boat as far south as possible to get warm and still stay in these United States. This meant San Diego, or rather La Jolla, a suburb of the same, probably the most attractive little town in the United States. The summer we put in beach-combing, varied by experiments with a glider on the hills, covered with cacti of the most painful variety known to man. Convinced that I had found my vocation, and wishing to know all that was fit to print about gas engines, I attended that fall the Young Men's Christian Association automobile school in Los Angeles, and learned, albeit imperfectly, the rudiments of "trouble-shooting," i.e. putting a car together enough for it to get out of the shop without dropping apart and yet not so much that it won't have to be back in a week for more repairs. I also helped on Saturdays in the construction of a friend's (C. F. Day) biplane at the Aerodrome, Venice. After this I worked in repair shops at San Diego, ran a second-hand Pope as a rent-car, and several times brought passengers home under its own steam, worked in the Ford shop at Detroit for a time assembling motors, but was soon back in Los Angeles, Cal., and working for a winter in a machine shop with lathe, planer, milling machine, etc. The spring of 1912 I started flying lessons with the Gage school at Griffith Park, Los Angeles, which stopped when the teacher left with the course half completed. In the fall when my wife was well enough to travel we came on to Manchester, Mass., and I had a few lessons on one of the Burgess Company and Curtis hydros at Marblehead, until bad weather put a stop to it. In December we sailed for England, and after a stay at Battle went to Cannes, where I have been taking lessons with the Hanriot (monoplane) school at Ziot, about ten miles away, and expect to try for a pilot's license some time in May. Member: Harvard Club of New York City.

I spent the summer after graduation as messenger for the New England National Bank in Boston, but in the fall I accepted an opportunity to go to Porto Rico in the banking house of De Ford and Company, the fiscal agents for the United States. My year there was an extremely interesting one, as the island was just beginning its reconstruction period. On my return, however, I went into the wool business for a period of a year and a half, during which time, as far as I could find out, no one wanted any wool except moths. I therefore left the business for others with more patience, and became a salesman for Perry, Coffin and Burr, bond dealers, and have been with them ever since, becoming a partner in the business some four years ago. After my marriage I moved to Milton, Mass., and have been living there ever since. I have been a common councilman of the City of Boston, and have recently retired as chairman of the board of selectmen of Milton.

The story of my life since leaving Harvard does not seem of sufficient interest for a detailed narrative; I can recall no incidents of a sufficiently stirring nature to make a real "story." After spending the year of 1898-1899 in various employments in and about Boston, I came home to Seattle and spent a year in prospecting, hunting and trapping in the Cascade Mountains, a very delightful year, full of hard work and small adventures. In 1900 I went to work for the A. Hambach Company in Seattle, and have remained with the same firm ever since in various capacities. I was married in 1909, and regard that achievement as one of the most fortunate of my career. Member: Harvard Club of Seattle, Seattle Athletic Club.

After graduating from Harvard, I spent three years at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, where I received the degree of S.T.B. in 1901. For the next year I was assistant minister at Grace Church, New Bedford. Here I married my wife, Helen Pamela Denison. In the fall of 1902 we went to Pomeroy in the state of Washington, where

I was in charge of a small mission church. After a year and a half my health gave out, and we returned east, where I was obliged to rusticate for eighteen months at the little fishing village of Westport Point, Mass. Wasn't it fun doing chores while the rest of 1898 appeared to be cutting large swaths of success in all directions! Our next move was to Germantown, Pa. Here I was assistant minister at Christ Church, and went to a Harvard dinner. In 1907 we came to Concord, and since then I have been rector of Trinity Church. I like my job and I hope it likes me. I like my wife and children and I know they like me.

FLETCHER DOBYNS

Born	Hilliards, Ohio, May 24, 1872.
Parents	William Alexander, Ann Miria Dobyns.
School	Oberlin Academy, Oberlin, Ohio.
Years in College	1893-1898.
Degrees	A.B., 1898.

In the fall of 1898 I went to Chicago and began the study of the law, and was admitted to the bar in 1901. During the presidential campaign of 1900 I organized and was president of the First Voters Republican National League, this work being done under the auspices of the Republican National Committee. After my admission to the bar I entered the office of Winston and Meagher, and engaged in the general practice of law. I was with this firm for about a year, and then entered the office of Eugene Prussing, remaining with him for a year. I was then chosen secretary and attorney for the Citizens Association of Chicago. After holding this position for a short time, I was, in the spring of 1903, appointed assistant state's attorney for Cook County, which position I held until the fall of 1906. During this time I was engaged in the prosecution of criminal cases, having charge of these cases both in the trial court and in the Supreme Court of the State. In October, 1906, I resigned from this position and entered the firm of McCordie and Sheriff, which was reorganized into our present firm of Sheriff, Dent, Dobyns and Freeman, with offices in the Rookery Building, Chicago. On January 1, 1907, I was appointed by Mr. Charles J. Bonaparte, then Attorney General of the United States, as special assistant district attorney for the northern district of Illinois, to have charge of the prosecution of certain cases arising under the Sherman anti-trust law. While holding this position I also had charge of the prosecution of John R. Walsh, who was charged with the misapplication of the funds of the Chicago National Bank, of which he was president. I also had charge of this case in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, where the judgment of conviction was affirmed. In February, 1910 I was appointed by Attorney General George W. Wickersham a special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, to prosecute cases arising under the national banking laws in the district of Idaho. I secured the conviction of the president and cashier of the Lewiston National Bank of Idaho, and also had charge of the case in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at San Francisco. During the last five years I have had charge of the trial work for the Northwestern Elevated Railroad Company at Chicago. I have been engaged only to a limited extent in the defence of criminal cases, my practice being on the civil side and general in its character. In the year 1910 I was chosen a member of the "Committee of Seven of the Peoria Conference," which led the fight against William Lorimer in Illinois. I am a member of the executive committee of the Civil Service Reform Association of Chicago, and during the winter of 1911-1912 was attorney for this organization in its fight upon Peter Bartzén, president of the county board of Cook County, who was engaged in wholesale violations of the law. In the spring of 1910 I was president of the Young Men's Progressive Republican Club of Chicago, that supported an anti-machine candidate for mayor. During the years 1911-1912 I was president of the Cook County Progressive Republican League. In the year 1912 I joined the Progressive party, supported Colonel Roosevelt, and was the candidate for attorney general of Illinois on the Progressive ticket. Member: Harvard Club of Chicago, University Club, City Club, Saddle and Cycle Club, Chicago Rowing Club, Harvard Club of New York.

The first three years after graduation were spent in the Harvard Law School, from which I took my degree in 1901. In July of the same year I married Helen Sturges of Chicago, and after a summer abroad settled down to suburban life at West New Brighton, borough of Richmond, city of New York. I entered the law office of Henry D. Hotchkiss, in the borough of Manhattan, as clerk, and remained there for three years. I opened a law office of my own in the spring of 1904, and discovered how much easier it is to acquire children than elients. In the fall of 1907 I was appointed assistant counsel to the public service commission of the state of New York for the first district (city of New York), and I have held the position ever since. In 1906 I moved from the borough of Richmond (Staten Island) to Greenwich, Conn., which was for one year my winter and summer residence. My present residence is 901 Lexington Avenue, borough of Manhattan, city of New York; during the summer I live in Greenwich, Conn., about thirty miles from New York City. In the autumn of 1898 I entered the engineering department of the B. F. Sturtevant Company, then at Jamaica Plain, Mass. At the end of ten months I graduated—with experience—and nothing more. The summer of 1899 was spent with a classmate, in Nova Scotia, collecting minerals. Some of the best specimens which we collected are now in the Agassiz Museum. During the following autumn I varied my experience, designing automatic machinery. In 1900 I entered the station engineering department of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company. The six years spent with this company were very productive, both in the acquaintanceships formed and in the experience gained. In 1906, partly for family reasons, I engaged in a business venture which in a few years proved to be decidedly uncongenial. For the past three years I have been connected with F. W. Dean, Incorporated, consulting and mill engineers, 53 State Street, Boston. The life of an engineer is always a busy one, but never too busy to prevent extending a welcome to old friends and classmates and especially those who have wandered far from Boston and the academic groves of Cambridge. Member: American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Harvard Club of Boston.

Years in College	1897-1898.

Business	Minister and teacher.
Address	(home) 1002 Lowry St., Columbia, Mo. (business) Bible College of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.

On leaving Harvard in June, 1900, I went to St. John, New Brunswick, where I spent the summer in pulpit supply work. In August I accepted a call to the pastorate of a church of the Disciples of Christ in Nevada, Mo. The pastorate began September 1, 1900, and continued for five years. During this period, aside from the regular duties of the pastorate, I raised a debt on the church of over fifteen thousand dollars, which had been standing since 1896. In the summer of 1905 I accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Christian Church in Honolulu, Hawaii. When nearing the close of the second year of the Honolulu pastorate a call came from the Bible College of Missouri to enter the field as endowment representative in Missouri until fifty thousand dollars should be raised, after which I should enter the school as professor of Old Testament. I began work for the Bible College of Missouri September, 1907, and continued in the field until June, 1910. I received about twelve hundred gifts, amounting in all to a little more than one hundred and fifteen thousand dollars. I was then given a year's leave of absence for study, preparatory to taking up my work in the college as a teacher. The leave of absence was begun in the 1910 session of the Harvard Summer School of Theology. From there I went to Germany. The first semester was spent in the University of Berlin and the second in the University of Marburg. Before school opened in Germany, between semesters, and before returning home at the close of the year, I managed through a two months' extension of my leave of absence to cover many parts of Europe, besides visiting Egypt as far as Assuan, Palestine from Hebron to Baal-bek, Smyrna and Ephesus, and Athens. Since returning home I have been busy teaching. The college lost its dean last June, and I have been made acting dean for this year. My wife and son have accompanied me in all my travels, except while I was endowment representative for the Bible College. I have been president of the Ministerial Union, Honolulu, Hawaii; chairman of Agitation Committee for the Anti-Saloon League in the Hawaiian Islands. I also established a lyceum lecture course, and led in the inauguration of the Associated Charities system at Nevada, Mo. I have written no books. While a student at Harvard I wrote one article for the American Journal of Folklore on Armenian Folklore as gathered from the Armenians about Boston. In the Hawaiian Islands I wrote frequently for the daily papers on temperance and religious questions. Since coming to the Bible College of Missouri my writing has been in the nature of newspaper articles and bulletins, all having to do with the status of education among our people, and with a view to furthering the interests of the Bible College of Missouri. Member: Harvard Club of Columbia, Mo., Campbell Institute (composed of Disciples of Christ in America who have graduated at some first-class institution, and, in addition, have had at least two years of post-graduate work).

I was taken ill in the latter part of my senior year at Harvard and had to wait until 1899 to take my final examinations, and received my degree at that time. After leaving college I spent three years in and around Joplin and Springfield, Mo., prospecting for zinc and lead. This business was unproductive of anything except experience, of which I gained a large and expensive assortment. In 1902 I came to California, and for four years devoted myself to orange and grape culture at Pomona. Last spring I sold both of my farming properties and have gone into business as a fruit broker in Los Angeles. Since coming to California I have been fairly successful in a business way, have married, and have one child, a boy three years old. I would be very glad to see any of my former classmates when they are in California. My present address is care Ely-Gillmore Fruit Company, Germain Building, Los Angeles, Cal. (Second Report.)

I commenced to study law, and continued to do so until about March, 1898, when I joined the Sixty-ninth Regiment, New York National Guard, and went into the United States service with that regiment in the war with Spain. When the regiment was mustered out of service in January, 1899, I took a position as a clerk in a stock broker's office in New York City. In September, 1900, I entered the New York Law School and commenced again to study law. I was admitted to the New York bar in June, 1901, and commenced to practise law at Port Chester, Westchester County, N. Y. After my father's death in the winter of 1902-1903, I was admitted to the firm of Emmet and Robinson, lawyers, 52 Wall Street, New York City, of which my father had been a member. In March, 1906, the firm was dissolved, and I continued to practise law at 52

Business	Physician.

After leaving college I entered the Medical School. The work of the four years proved increasingly fascinating as the course advanced, and the patient became more and more the subject of study. The surgical service at the Massachusetts General Hospital was engrossing. The stimulus of important duties in caring for the desperate cases of accident and disease was always inspiring. Owing to an accident I was forced to stop work for a year. Part of this time was spent abroad visiting foreign clinics. I then returned and served my surgical service at the Massachusetts General Hospital. My sympathy and interest were keenly aroused by the six months' service at the Boston Lying-in Hospital in 1905. To solve the problems here met required observation, knowledge, alertness, judgment and mechanical skill. These problems so interested me that later I was led to make this my chosen field of endeavor. 1906 was spent as resident physician at Corey Hill Hospital and in private practice.

I encountered the enormous psychic element in sickness and disease, often exaggerated in the highly strung sensitive individual. 1907 found me in the pathological laboratory of the Boston City Hospital, grounding myself more thoroughly in the science of medicine, under the inspiring guide, teacher and friend, Dr. F. B. Mallory. 1908 opened with a tour of medical wanderings to the hospitals of New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. By advice I then went abroad and made a prolonged stay in Munich, where I worked, studied and played in the shadow of a master mind. Music, art, and outdoors in the Alps filled my leisure time. Shorter visits to the obstetric clinics of Vienna, Berlin, Paris, London and Dublin rounded out a wonderful year. 1909 saw me back on the telephone, as house officer in obstetrics at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, under J. Whitridge Williams, a remarkable teacher, organizer, writer and clear thinker. This service occupied my time up to September. On the fifteenth of this month I was married, and soon returned to Boston to practise. During the past three years my efforts have been divided between research and practice. At present I am physician in chief to the Maverick Dispensary, East Boston, and director for appointments for the medical alumni, Harvard Medical School. I also belong to the committee of pre-natal care of Boston and vicinity. Articles which I have written: A Series of Ninety-one Blood Cultures (Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, 1907); The Diagnostic Value of the Search for the Spirocheta Pallida in the Umbilical Cord of the New-born (Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, 1910); A Review of the Midwife Situation (Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, 1911); The Midwife: her Future in the United States (American Journal of Obstetrics, 1912); The Variations in the Female Pelvis, based on a Study of 217 Specimens of the American Indian Squaw (Boylston Medical Prize Essay, 1912; to appear in Biometrika, London, 1913). Member: Massachusetts Medical Society, New England Pediatric Society, American Association for Study and Prevention of Infant Mortality, Twentieth Century Club of Boston.

I live in a quiet sort of way,
 In a quiet sort of a street;
 I don't meet a great many people,
 Nor impress the people I meet.
 The newspapers never mention my name:
 The world doesn't care what I do.
 I never go in for anything much,
 And my intimate friends are few.
That's me!

The first few years after leaving the Scientific School were spent in rolling-mill work at Bethlehem and Homestead, Pa., and in development work in big power compresses. Later I went to Los Angeles, Cal., where I again engaged in rolling-mill work. The "land of eternal sunshine" becoming monotonous, I returned to Boston and put in four years with the Elliott Company, making addressing machinery. This was followed by an excursion into the "lottery business" by trying to float a stamp-affixing machine, which has not floated. Now, I am with the Pneumatic Scale Corporation of Norfolk Downs, Mass.

In September, 1898, I began a three years' course of study in the Newton Theological Institution (Baptist). During the summer of 1899 I supplied the Baptist Church at Northport, Me., and during the summer of 1900 I supplied the Baptist Church of Pondville, Bournedale, Mass. June, 1901, I received my S.T.B. in consideration of my special work in Old Testament reading and my thesis, The Social Teachings of the Prophets. Only two of the twenty-two graduates of my class received this degree. During the same month my church, the West Somerville Baptist Church, by the advice of a council, ordained me to the ministry. The following month I became pastor of the Vineyard Haven Baptist Church. More than a year later I was married. A weakness of the lungs compelled my resignation, which took effect July, 1903. Going to Colorado, I rapidly recovered from my lung trouble. In September, 1903, I became pastor of the First Baptist Church of Delta, Col., where I remained nearly four years. The church was strengthened by revivals and diligent cultivation of the Sunday school. During my pastorate we built a new meeting-house. In June, 1907, I became pastor of the Mesa Baptist Church of Pueblo, Col. Here during my pastorate of nearly four years I received more than a hundred members into the church, about half of whom came by baptism. While in Colorado among my extra parished work I preached at outstations, served as president of the county Sunday-school association, also as member of the board of directors for the Colorado (Baptist) Woman's College. While in Colorado my only child was born. With two weeks of vacation between pastorates, I became in May, 1911, pastor of the Central Baptist Church of Duluth. I have been honored by membership on the board of directors for the Minnesota Baptist State Convention. Since the first of January, 1913, I have been making weekly contributions to the Standard of Chicago, Ill. I have been engaged frequently in writing articles that are incidental to the life of a pastor.

RICHARD THORNTON FISHER

Born

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 9, 1876.

Parents

Edward Thornton, Ellen Bowditch (Thayer) Fisher.

School	Harvard School, Chicago, Ill.
Years in College	1897-1898.
Degrees	A.B., 1898; M.F. (Yale), 1903.
Unmarried
Business	Forester: and professor at Harvard.
Address	(home) 131 Westmorley, Cambridge, Mass. (business) 141 Milk St., Boston, Mass.

The first job that I got upon leaving college was an appointment as collector from the United States Biological Survey at Washington. I was assigned to a small party in the Shasta region of California, where I trapped and hunted until the end of September, 1898. The ensuing academic year I spent at Cambridge as assistant in English. During the winter I made the acquaintance of Mr. Pinchot, who offered me a chance in the United States Forest Service, then in its infancy, and in June, 1899, I went to the state of Washington as student assistant to work on an investigation of the Douglas fir. The next year I was given charge of a party to make a report on the California redwood. By September, 1901, having got as far in the service as I could without passing the civil service examination, I took a year's furlough for study at the Yale Forest School, from which I received the degree of M.F. Having passed the examination in May, 1902, I returned to the government service for the year 1902-1903, during which period I was chiefly employed in giving assistance to private owners of woodlands in the eastern states. The results of this work in collaboration with Mr. H. S. Graves were published as a bulletin called "The Woodlot." Early in the winter of 1902-1903 I was offered the position of instructor in forestry at Harvard, with the chance to organize a school. Having accepted this offer, I resigned from the service in the spring, and joined Mr. H. S. Graves for a four months' trip abroad, as additional preparation for teaching. I began work at Cambridge in February, 1904, having as first colleague Mr. J. G. Jack of the Arnold Arboretum. For four years we were organized as one of the undergraduate programmes of the Lawrence Scientific School, but in 1907-1908, with the abolition of this school and the founding of the Graduate Schools of Applied Science, we became a strictly graduate institution. In the same year Mr. John Ames's gift of the Harvard Forest brought our equipment for practical instruction and scientific work up to a very high standard. Since then I have given the bulk of my time to the work of the school, but I have kept in touch with outside professional work through my connection with the office of Fisher and Bryant, Incorporated, 141 Milk Street, Boston. Articles which I have written: The Redwood (United States Forest Service, Bulletin 38), The Woodlot (in collaboration with H. S. Graves, United States Forest Service Bulletin). Member: Colonial Club of Cambridge, Oakley Country Club of Watertown, Pea Island Club of North Carolina, Society of American Foresters, Eastern States Foresters Association, American Forestry Association, Massachusetts Forestry Association.

After completing my course at the Harvard Law School in 1901 and getting the degree of LL.B., I immediately passed the bar examinations. I travelled in the summer of 1901 in the Lake Superior copper region and Canada and also somewhat in the South. In the fall of the above year I began the practice of law in the office of the late Lafayette G. Blair of Boston, where I gained considerable experience in active practice in the courts and otherwise. Three years later I established offices for myself in Boston and Holliston, Mass., and have been engaged in general legal practice since. Much of it has been that of a country lawyer in my own town of Holliston,—sometimes office practice, again trial work, legislative counsel and general legal business. I have lived most of the time on the family estate, Mt. Hollis Farm, Holliston, where I have a cosy home of my own, and have been pretty actively identified with local government, political and town affairs. I have been moderator of Holliston for eight years, representative to the General Court from the eighth Middlesex district in 1908, serving on the committees of constitutional amendments and public lighting. I am president of the Holliston Village Improvement Society and vice-president of the Historical Society of Holliston. In 1910 legal business took me to Nova Scotia, and in 1911 I visited England and France and other parts of Europe. Part of my time I devote to managing our country estate, Mt. Hollis Farm, comprising one hundred and fifty acres. I intend in the future to devote myself to local practice, to my country place and to town affairs and possibly to local and state politics and to domestic and foreign travel. Member: Masons, Mt. Hollis Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Holliston Historical Society, Holliston Village Improvement Society.

I have been engaged in the active practice of law since July 1, 1901, in St. Louis, Mo. I have never held public office—I have never attempted to do so. My practice has been almost entirely confined to corporate matters. I am a member of the firm of Fordyce, Holliday and White, formed January 1, 1908. I have found that classmates and friends whom I met while at Harvard have helped me in many material as well as other ways, and I take this occasion of acknowledging my gratitude to Harvard for the many benefits I have directly and indirectly obtained by reason of the four years I was fortunate enough to pass in Cambridge. While I cannot accurately state that I have specialized in any branch of law, my practice has made me familiar with the various legal matters pertaining to banks, railroads, oil, public service and life insurance companies. With few exceptions, my firm has been retained to defend rather than to prosecute. EDWARD WINSLOW FOX

In May, 1900, while pursuing graduate work at Harvard, I was offered and accepted the position of assistant professor of zoölogy in the University of Nevada and bacteriologist in the Nevada Experiment Station. Shortly after my arrival here a disastrous fire destroyed our building and all our collections, which considerably handicapped my work the first year. The following summer I spent a month in study at the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C. An investigation begun while I was at Harvard was completed at this time and published in the Proceedings of the American Academy of Sciences, Vol. 37, No. 8, October, 1901. The following year my work was of much the same character as that of the preceding year. Several public addresses also engaged my attention during the year: one was delivered before the Young Men's Christian Association on The Relation of Science to Religion; one before the State Teachers' Institute on Nature Study; a series of lectures on nature study topics was conducted by Dr. P. B. Kennedy and myself for the benefit of the public school teachers of the city, and, in this connection, we published several nature study pamphlets; the Station Staff also held a number of Farmers' Institutes, at which I gave lectures on The Contagious and Infectious Animal Diseases of the State. During this year I was president of the University of Nevada Alumni Association. At the close of the school year I went to Cambridge and was married on June 10 to Miss Alice S. Moreland at Brookline, Mass. After renewing old college friendships and visiting several places in the East, we came west and spent the remainder of the summer in collecting birds in eastern Nevada. In September I was made associate professor of zoölogy and bacteriology, with an increase of salary. In addition to the routine work of teaching and the regular station duties, we continued our public lectures on nature study topics, and the Station Staff conducted several Farmers' Institutes at which I gave talks on Animal Diseases, The Relation of Birds and Rodents to Agriculture, etc. Through the kindness of Dr. Jordan of Stanford University, the summer of 1903 was spent at the Hopkins Laboratory at Pacific Grove, Cal., in the study and collection of marine fauna and flora for use in class and investigation work. In September, 1903, I was promoted to a full professorship, with a further increase of salary. That fall we organized a Nevada Academy of Sciences, of which I was a charter member. The summer of 1904 was spent in the study of ground squirrels and other rodents, which had become a serious economic evil to the agricultural interests in eastern Nevada. The results of this investigation were published in March, 1905, as Bulletin No. 58 of the Nevada Agricultural Experiment Station. The work of collecting the birds and mammals of the state was also continued during this year and the next. In addition to the regular annual published reports of the Experiment Station work carried on by my department, I have, from time to time, written articles for the newspapers of the state on various outbreaks of animal diseases and on rodent pests. In the summer of 1905 there was a reorganization of the work of the station in relation to the university, whereby I was relieved of my former station duties and given some of the teaching work in botany. A laboratory assistant being given me, more opportunity will be found for developing advanced courses. A course of lectures on Evolution, which is open to the general public, is being given this year, and one lecture on the subject was delivered before the Reno Men's Club a short time ago. I was recently elected vice-president of this club. (Second Report.)

During the year 1909-1910 I was given my sabbatical leave, and spent seven months in travel and study in Europe. I still hold a professorship in the University of Nevada. I have written: A paper on Reactions of Limax Maximus to Directive Stimuli, a bulletin on Ground Squirrels and Other Rodent Pests in Nevada, several nature study bulletins, and a number of minor articles for newspapers, magazines, etc. Member: American Academy of Sciences, Nevada Science Club.

After leaving Harvard in 1898 I taught for three years: one year in the Chelsea, Mass., High School, one year in the University of Illinois, chemistry in both cases, and one year as principal of the Steep Brook School in Fall River, Mass. I then returned to Harvard for graduate work in chemistry and crystallography for a year. The next year I spent in the University of Munich doing the same kind of work. On my return from Munich I decided to devote my whole time to my work as associate editor of the Photo Era, with which I had been connected since its inception in 1898. I left this magazine in the fall of 1905, and became one of the editors of the American Amateur Photographer. In May, 1906, I acquired Bubier's Popular Electrician, changed the name to Electrician and Mechanic, and am now editor and general manager. In 1906 I wrote a book of travels entitled Among Bavarian Inns, which was published by L. C. Page and Company of Boston. I am now writing another, to be published this fall by the same firm under the name of Castles and Keeps of Scotland, and expect to sail for Europe in May to make photographic illustrations for it. My first response to this request was "Practising law." Hayes sent it back, however, and demanded more, in response to which I relate as follows: I left college April 25, 1898, to join my regiment, the First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, U. S. V., which had been ordered into the service of the United States. We served until November at various harbor posts in Boston and vicinity and in New York Harbor. On the muster out of my regiment I returned to the Law School, graduating in 1901. I then travelled abroad for about six months, and spent about the same length of time in St. Louis, returning to Boston to practise law, which I have been doing ever since. I have kept up my interest in military matters, and served on the staffs of Governors Guild and Draper, and at present command a battalion of coast artillery in the Massachusetts Militia. I am also commander of the Massachusetts Commandery of the naval and military order of the Spanish-American War, and vice-president of the officers' club of Boston. A few years ago I attempted to enter city politics by running for alderman from Ward 8. I received the Republican nomination, but was badly defeated at the election. Upon receiving the degree of A.B. at Harvard in the spring of 1898, I returned to Cleveland with the full expectation of studying law at Harvard. Just at that time, however, my father assumed control of the Sturtevant Lumber Company, with which he had been associated for thirty-five years, and in this way opened up a place for me with him. We changed the name to the Gill Lumber Company, which name we still retain. In 1902 my father retired from active business and since then my older brother, Charles Quayle Gill, and myself have carried on the business with great success. My father died February 4, 1908. I was for three years Cleveland correspondent for the Lumber Journal, a magazine devoted to the interests of lumber merchants. After having held the Ohio championship for two successive years, I gave up whist playing as too strenuous. On the whole, I have kept "the even tenor of my way" since leaving college, and while I have done nothing startling I feel that Harvard can be about half as proud of me as I am of Harvard. Member: University Club, Hermit Club, Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, East End Tennis Club, Cleveland Board of Lumber Dealers, all of Cleveland.

In May of my graduating year I entered the volunteer service of the United States in the war against Spain as a second lieutenant in the First Regiment Volunteer Engineers. As I had taken some extra courses during my four years, my degree was sent to me. I saw service with my regiment in time of war in Porto Rico, and was promoted to first lieutenant and acting captain. During the following three years I studied law at the Harvard and Columbia law schools, and in 1901, returning from a business trip to China and the Philippines, I accepted the secretaryship of the American Deposit and Loan Company in New York. This led me to the secretaryship and then to the vice-presidency and directorship of the Equitable Trust Company of New York. I sold my interest and retired from this connection in 1910, to enter the banking and brokerage firm of J. S. Bache and Company, at 42 Broadway, New York. Having passed my boyhood at an inconvenient distance from schools, I was somewhat late in entering college, which I did at Haverford, with the class of 1898. Anxious to make up time, I condensed this course into three years, taking the degree of A.B., with honors, in 1897, and joined the Class of 1898 at Harvard for its final year. Since then, partly from inclination, partly from force of circumstances, my time has been spent chiefly in travel. The most interesting and promising of this has been in Florida and the Bahamas, and I am now trying to make final arrangements for an extended cruise in the latter islands, to explore, photograph and collect birds for the American Museum of Natural History in New York. I wrote A Florida Key Cruise, a magazine article. Member: University Club of Philadelphia, Biscayne Bay Yacht Club, West Chester Club, West Chester Golf and Country Club, National Geographic Society, and Young Men's Christian Association.

In the fall of 1898 I entered the Harvard Medical School. During the four years of study here, I lived in Cambridge. I was a member of the Boylston Medical Society at the school. During my last two years at the Medical School I did out-patient work at the Children's Hospital, the Boston City and Massachusetts General Hospitals. In 1902 I received an appointment as surgical house officer at the Massachusetts General Hospital, and lived there for sixteen months. The life here was extremely pleasant and interesting. There were twelve other men living there all the time, many of whom were college classmates. On getting my diploma from this hospital, I went to Europe, partly for pleasure and partly for continuing surgery. I saw old Bassini operate in Padua, Italy, and visited Paris, where I met M. Guyon and others. I also visited many of the larger cities and hospitals, and finally sailed from Liverpool for Boston. Here I started the practice of medicine in Cambridge, at 1705 Massachusetts Avenue. During the winter of my first year in practice I was appointed head coach of the Harvard hockey team. I found this did not interfere with my practice much, and it gave me much pleasure, especially when the team beat Yale in New York. In 1905 I was married and went to live at 5 Appian Way, Cambridge, where I also opened an office. The first six months of 1905 I had charge of skin diseases at the Massachusetts General Hospital, under Drs. John T. Bowen and Charles J. White. (Second Report.)

Immediately on leaving college I spent the summer traveling abroad. In the autumn I began preparations for the Ecole des Beaux Arts, Paris, and was admitted the following fall. My five years spent as a student were twice interrupted by illness and death in the family. On my return to New York, 1903, I entered the office of McKim, Mead and White, and was set to work on tracing drawings for the new Pennsylvania station. In the summer of 1905 I spent six months working under D. H. Burnham on plans for the city of San Francisco. I lived in a bungalow on top of Twin Peaks overlooking the city. I had charge of the Madison State Capitol competition for George B. Post, which is now nearing completion. I formed a partnership for the practice of architecture, under the firm name of Carpenter, Blair and Gould. Sickness required my leaving New York for a year and a half, and finally decided to come to Seattle (1908), and have been practising architecture here since that date. My interest in city planning was instrumental in causing a City Plans Commission to be created, which carried a provision for expenditure of sixty thousand dollars in preparing a report. Opposition from a small group of property owners prevented the adoption of the report. We are still hoping here and there to get portions of the report carried out. We have a very active local chapter of architects. I have been a member of its council the last two years. A recently formed municipal league of one thousand members has been active in obtaining reform legislation and publishes a weekly paper. For two years I have been on its executive board. I was elected president of the Seattle Fine Arts Society six months ago. I find Puget Sound a very attractive country. Seattle is an interesting and thoroughly cosmopolitan city. Member: Society of Beaux Arts Architects of New York, American Institute of Architects (Seattle Chapter), Architectural League of the Pacific Coast, University Club of Seattle, College Club of Seattle, Golf and Country Club of Seattle, Seattle Fine Arts Society, Municipal League, Chamber of Commerce.

MALCOLM SCOLLAY GREENOUGH

I spent the first year after leaving Harvard as a graduate student at the Harvard Graduate School, and at its close took the degree of Master of Arts. After a summer of teaching in the Harvard Summer School, I became an assistant in English for the year 1899-1900. The next year I was made an instructor in English, and continued to be an instructor until the end of the year 1901-1902. I then resumed study in the Graduate School, and took the degree of Ph.D. in the year of 1903-1904, having meanwhile held the Shattuck Scholarship and the Austin Fellowship. During the year 1904-1905, as a Rogers Fellow, I studied at London and Oxford, and on my return in September, 1905, was again made an instructor in English, with general charge of English A, and with some work in English literature of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, which subjects, with American Literature, have continued to be my main interests. In 1906 I was made a member of the faculty of arts and sciences. A year later I resigned to become professor of English and chairman of the department of English at the University of Illinois, in which capacity I served for three years. In September, 1910, I returned to Harvard as assistant professor of English, and resumed most of my former duties, together with service upon various committees, such as the committee on admission, the library council and the administrative board. After graduating from college I secured a position with the Franklin Educational Company of Boston, dealers in chemistry and physics apparatus. I remained with them about a year, when I received an offer from the Denver Fire Clay Company of Denver, Col., dealers in mining, assaying and school apparatus, which I accepted. This position I held for six years, or until the year 1907, when I received and accepted an offer from the Hoffmann, Pinther and Bosworth Company of Mexico City, dealers also in mining and assaying apparatus. This position I still hold, and am quite contented to live here, although the United States is always preferable to foreign countries, socially speaking. We have just passed through a ten days' battle in the city itself, and although there were many lives lost, including some foreigners, the foreign colonies suffered very slightly, except through the nervous suspense and excitement and the inconveniences which the closing of the stores and shutting off of the water supply naturally cause. I should be very glad to hear from any of the boys who care to write me. My address is Apo. 684, care of Hoffman, Pinther and Bosworth Company, Mexico. Member: Mexico City Country Club.

Address	(home) 633 Church St., Ann Arbor, Mich. (business) Chemical Laboratory, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich.

After receiving the doctor's degree in 1902, the authorities of the University granted me a travelling fellowship and thus made possible a further year of study in German universities,—Technische Hochschule zu Berlin and Universität zu Göttingen. Upon returning to this country I accepted a research assistantship in chemistry at Chicago University, but remained there only a few months before coming to the University of Michigan in February, 1904. Since this time I have served continuously at this University, first as instructor and now as assistant professor. My work at Michigan consists of a course of lectures on general inorganic chemistry and a half course on heterocyclic organic chemistry, together with the direction of an advanced course in organic research. For several years I have been vice-chairman and secretary of the division of organic chemistry of the American Chemical Society, and in this way have been brought more and more closely in touch with all of the investigations in this field in this country. Just recently I served as a member of the sectional committee on organic chemistry for the Eighth International Congress of Applied Chemistry, held in New York, September, 1913. No amount of chemical work has been or ever will be able to extinguish my burning tastes for the wild. The greater part of my recreation time is spent in small game hunts here in Michigan. Books and articles which I have written: (books) A Laboratory Outline of General Chemistry (co-author with Alexander Smith of Columbia University) (Century Company, New York City, 1907); The Calculations of General Chemistry (with Definitions, Explanations and Problems) (D. Van Nostrand Company, New York, 1909). After leaving college I was given a position on my father's estate to take care of the pay-roll, etc. This continued for about two years, when our manufacturing company sent me to Paris to take care of the exhibition of 1900. During this period I married Miss M. E. Southern of Richmond, Va., in London. Upon our return to the States I took care of part of the advertising of our company and set up exhibits at Buffalo and St. Louis, which thoroughly disgusted me with this class of work. From early youth mechanics were a fascination to me, so as opportunities were offered I was glad to develop new machines. This work, with the study of the economy of production and absolute justice to the employee, has since occupied my time. Member: Baltusrol Golf Club of Baltusrol, N. J., Harvard Club of New York, Essex Troop, New Jersey National Guards.

I became a member of the Boston Stock Exchange in July, 1902, and on July 1, 1906, I formed a partnership for the transaction of a general banking and brokerage business with Herbert A. Tucker, Amherst, 1882, and George Winthrop Bouvé, 1898 (withdrew from this partnership in 1911), under the firm name of Tucker, Hayes and Company, with offices at 8 Congress Street, Boston. Since the fall of 1903 I have lived at Andover, and there I find my greatest interests and activities. I am deeply interested in the affairs of Phillips Academy, though I have no official connection with that institution other than that I coached a few of their successful baseball nines. I am thoroughly in sympathy with the splendid work carried on by the school, its principal and its corps of instructors, and I hope to see the day when more boys will go there to complete their preparation for Harvard.

Last year (1912) I was elected a member of the school committee of the town of Andover for a term of three years. This constitutes my only public offence. My family prospers! Deo gratias! As long as our life is full of ambition and success we are apt to be too busy to sit down for a review of its events. At least this was the case with me when our Class Secretary called for our reports. To-day, when my life has lost almost all of its brightness, I hesitate to add the story of my misfortune to the accounts of the success of others. I stayed at Cambridge after graduation in order to prepare for scientific work in chemistry. I was at first assistant in physical chemistry and later instructor in electrochemistry. Together with the doctor's degree the University granted me the Parker Travelling Fellowship for a year's study in Europe. I left for England in August, 1901, and after a trip through England, France and Germany, studied at Leipzig at the famous Institute of Professor Ostwald. I did not return to America until the middle of 1903, but was called back to Germany by a large German concern. In their employ I worked at Leipzig until, in 1905, I took charge of the research laboratory of this firm in Berlin. Although the work was rather congenial, and though incidentally I found an opportunity to see a good part of England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Austria-Hungary, I decided to go home again in 1907. At the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York I found a place entirely to my liking. In May, 1909, I was about ready to close the year's work and sail for a summer's trip through Switzerland and Russia, when an accident at the laboratory sent me to the hospital. An explosion had thrown a strong alkali solution into both eyes. In spite of the best medical care, it was impossible to save the eyes, and when I left the hospital I was permanently and completely deprived of vision. I was taken to Berne, Switzerland, for a year's recuperation. In the spring of 1910 I returned to the Institute for an attempt to take up the work which I had been forced to abandon. But the nervous strain of New York life proved too much for me. For this reason I had to select a more quiet place, which I believe I have found at Hannover, Germany. At the Institute of Technology at Hannover a former Leipzig friend has placed his laboratory at my disposal. With the help of an assistant I have carried on scientific work in physics and chemistry.

Upon graduation I entered the Harvard Medical School, and four years later received my doctor's degree. I next spent two years at the University of Strassburg studying biological chemistry, then returned to Cambridge, where I have lived ever since. In 1904-1905 I was lecturer on biological chemistry in Harvard College; for the next five years I was instructor in the same subject in the college and Medical School; since 1910 I have been assistant professor. Two years ago I began to give an undergraduate course in the history of science, and this has increased my college work so that it now exceeds my work under the medical faculty. My scientific investigations have consisted chiefly of applications of physical chemistry to physiology, especially studies of equilibria between acids and bases in the organism. Last February I gave a course of lectures in the Lowell Institute on The Fitness of the World for Life. Books and articles which I have written: The Fitness of the Environment (New York, The Macmillan Company, 1913); contributions to the Ergebnisse der Physiologie, and to the eleventh edition of Neubauer-Huppert's Handbuch der Harnanalyse, and various chemical and physiological papers. Five years have gone since her death, and I am still single, but have two sons about eleven and nine years of age, whom I shall send to Harvard in a few years. The enchantment lent by distance enables me to view the first two years of graduate life with considerable satisfaction. After six months of service as a non-heroic soldier man and eighteen months of endeavor to edit books which others could sell and to sell books which others had edited, I realized that the day when degrees are distributed was aptly named Commencement. In the fall of 1900 I entered the employ of the American Sheet Steel Company (later merged with the American Tin Plate Company as the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company). With that concern I have remained up to the present and have found there interesting occupations and agreeable associations. In New York, N. Y., Pittsburgh, Pa., Vandergrift, Pa., St. Louis, Mo., and Chicago, Ill., I have worked at accounting, adjusting, mill managing and selling. I was married in 1899 to a school friend, Miss Emeline M. Newell. I count my family history of more importance than the commercial chronicle. We have two children, a Pennsylvania boy of ten and a Missouri girl of five years. We make our home in Wilmette, Ill.

After leaving Harvard I went abroad and studied forestry at the University of Munich, spending the best part of three years there. On my return to America I did nothing for about a year, and then went to Biltmore, N. C., and studied forestry for one winter and then spent one summer as student assistant on the forest service, being employed in Maine. The following winter I took up landscape gardening, and followed this profession for the next four years. Owing to ill health I was obliged to give this work up. For the next eighteen months I was with Mr. Oakes Ames, assisting in his botanical laboratory at North Easton, Mass. I left there on account of an operation, and did nothing until the following year or later. After my marriage in 1909 I moved to Stoughton, Mass., where I lived for the next two years. The past two seasons I have been making a study of grasses, and during the winter of 1911-1912 I was enrolled as a graduate student at Harvard. Last summer I was temporarily employed as expert in the Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C. I have written articles in American Forestry relating to forestry, on Landscape Gardening in Suburban Life, and on Grasses in Rhodora. In September, after leaving college, I started to teach in the public school of Georgetown, S. C., as vice-principal of the school. The next February, 1899, I was made principal of the school, where I remained until June, 1900, when I won in competitive examination the appointment as vice-principal in the public schools of Charleston, S. C. I held that position until June, 1902, when I accepted the appointment as college secretary of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the state of Virginia. In December, 1903, I accepted the call of the foreign department of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association to become their representative in the city of Havana, Cuba, where I arrived with my wife on January 18, 1904, and later in the year organized a branch of the Young Men's Christian Association. For nine years I have been here as the general secretary of this institution, and, having secured recently a fund of one hundred thousand dollars for a building of our own, we shall begin within three months the active work of construction. My life since leaving college has been quiet and uneventful. Three years were spent at the Law School, after which I took my bar examinations, and was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in the early fall of 1901. I served two years' legal apprenticeship in a law office, and in September, 1903, set up for myself at 60 State Street, where I now am. My practice is general, although I have done considerable conveyancing and some legal writing. As for my home life, it has been quiet and happy. I was married December 5, 1905, to Martha H. Coit at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., Miss

Coit being a niece of the founder and also of the present rector of that name of that school. Since marriage I have lived in Brookline, before that time having lived continuously at my father's house in Boston since graduation. (Second Report.)

Since the last report I have lived quietly in Brookline and practised law in Boston, my life having been quite uneventful and of no interest to the class. My positions of honor or trust have not been numerous or great as the world views greatness.

After graduating from Harvard I went abroad and entered Trinity College, Oxford, in October, 1898. At Oxford I studied law for two years under Sir William Anson, the vice-chancellor of the University, who acted as my tutor. I was on several of the college crews, and also won the Trinity College Point to Point Steeplechase (or "Grind," as it is called). During the vacations I travelled in Turkey, Asia Minor, Algiers, Tunis, in the Sahara Desert and on the Continent. I returned to Washington in the fall of 1900, and entered the Columbia School of Law and Diplomacy. I was admitted to the bar August 30, 1901. In October, 1901, I became associated with Judge Charles C. Cole in the practice of law, and continued this connection until March, 1905, with the exception of four months in the summer of 1902, when I was in the law office of Page and Conant in New York. In April, 1905, I opened a private law office, and subsequently became associated in the general practice of law with Mr. Stuart McNamara, under the firm name of McNamara and Huidekoper. On July 1, 1909, I was appointed Assistant United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, which position, at the date of writing, I still retain. After a short training in the banking business, I went into insurance. Shortly after this the death of my father occurred, and I was appointed administrator of his estate. In 1909 I became obsessed with a desire to travel, cut loose and started on a voyage round the world, which with two serious illnesses lasted more than three years. During the school year 1898-1899 I tried to acquaint the entering class of the Everett, Mass., High School with the subject of physics, and had one class in plane geometry for part of the year. For ten months, 1899-1900, I worked in the Boston office of the Lowell Observatory, preparing observations of Mars and the satellites of Jupiter for publication in the annals of the observatory. The chief events of the first three summers after I finished the Harvard course were the long tramps with a small party of friends in the mountainous parts of New England. The longest tramp, in 1900, was nearly all in New Hampshire, lasted twenty-three days, covered about two hundred and twenty miles, and included the ascent of Mount Washington. During the winter of 1900-1901 I worked a few weeks in a Boston book store, a few more in the office of a Philadelphia paper, and tried some special studies for office work. In May, 1901, I joined the force in a civil engineer's office, and for more than a year helped to plan out, measure and guide the construction of trolley lines, mostly in eastern Massachusetts. In June, 1902, I became an observer in the United States Weather Bureau, and was assigned to the New York office for instruction. Within a few weeks I could spot strato-cumulus clouds, adjust the telethermograph, and dodge the verbal and other brickbats from the provoked public, so I was assigned to look out for the evening duties, and did so, thirteen evenings out of fourteen, for some months. Naturally there was little chance for taking in "shows," but some daylight excursions up the Hudson, or through the Westchester County hills or over into New Jersey were enjoyed. In December, 1902, I was moved to the interesting old city of Richmond, Va., where the tawny James tumbles down among bush-grown rocky islets to the tide level. The residents like to speak poetically of the city as being "like Rome, enthroned on her seven hills," but one who has taken Professor Davis's courses sees that in reality Richmond lies along and near the irregular edge of a considerably dissected plateau. In July, 1903, I went to Cape Henry, where my work was largely watching the "ships that pass in the night." Save six months in Norfolk, during the fall and winter of 1903-1904, I remained at the Cape until August, 1905. The 1607 settlers made their first landing here, but did not stop long, for there seems to have been no lighthouse then, and the evening band concerts had not begun. From Cape Henry I came to Washington for five weeks, then to the research observatory at Mount Weather, near Bluemont, Va., for three months. In January, 1906, I returned to Washington, which has since been my station. For over two years my work was chiefly on the Monthly Weather Review, assisting the editor, Professor Abbe. Since then the National Weather Bulletin, the Snow and Ice Bulletin and various other publications of the Bureau have been my chief concerns. Vacations of from two or three days up to three weeks have usually been spent in New England. I resided in Washington until April, 1909, seven months after my marriage. We then bought a two-and-a-half-acre ranch in the Virginia suburbs, six miles from the White House. Here I raise potatoes and turnips and reduce the cost of living. The region has a great excess of brambles all the year and mud fully half of it; also of strawberries in June and chestnuts in October. There are marked deficiencies in worthy schools, good roads and automobiles, but we have grown to like the Old Dominion nevertheless. As to offices held, I have attained nothing dizzier than the deaconship of a small church and the treasurership of a local citizens' association. Naturally the most notable articles I have written are, "Please forward your annual dues at once."

After a vacation I entered the Medical School of Harvard, and having completed the course there at the end of four years, worked for short periods in various hospitals of New York and Boston. July 1, 1903, I was made resident interne of St. Luke's Hospital, New Bedford, for one year, and the following year I entered for a similar service the Children's Hospital in Boston. After leaving the latter institution I went to Europe for special studies of the subjects of pediatrics and obstetrics, taking courses and serving as resident assistant in London, Berlin and Vienna, and visiting also Leeds.

Paris, Amsterdam, Dresden, Prague and Munich, to see the hospitals and men of note in these places. Returning home the latter part of 1905, I took a short vacation, and then decided to locate in New Bedford, Mass. In October, 1898, I entered the Harvard Law School. Upon graduating, three years later, I was admitted to the bar, and entered the office of Messrs. Ropes, Gray and Gorham of Boston, counsellors at law. After about a year in this office I was married, and went to Europe for a few months. When I came home I settled in Milton, where I still reside, and resumed the practice of law. The firm of Hoague and Johnson opened their offices in October, 1902, the firm consisting of Theodore Hoague, 1898, and myself. After six laborious years, rendered exceedingly pleasant to me, however, by my partner's sunny disposition and pleasing ways, we dissolved partnership. Since then I have continuously practised law individually, being all the time associated with Charles Stetson, who I believe came from Yale. During a part of 1908 and 1909 Austin Potter, Harvard, 1895, was associated with us. I have taken some interest in town affairs in Milton, and in the affairs of the Republican party. I have served on various town committees, and am now a member of the Republican town committee and chairman of the Milton water board. Member: Union Club of Boston, Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of New York, Hoosic Whisick Club of Canton, Mass., Kebo Valley Club of Bar Harbor, Me.

Business	Manufacturing.
Address	(home) 922 Clinton St. Philadelphia, Pa. (business) 1225-1239 Callowhill St., Philadelphia, Pa.

After leaving college I spent the summer of 1898 at North-east Harbor, Maine, and in September of that year entered the employ of George H. McFadden and Brother, cotton merchants. I was in their Philadelphia office until August, 1899, when I was sent to their Providence (R. I.) office. I was employed as salesman in this and the New Bedford (Mass.) office until the summer of 1901. At that time I was taken with a severe illness, which kept me from business for three months. At the end of this time I left the employ of George H. McFadden and Brother, and entered the bond department of Dewing, Ruggles and Mills, bankers, Philadelphia. This firm was afterwards changed to Mills and Company. In July, 1903, my father died, and we (my mother, sister and myself) moved from 1719 Locust Street to The Gladstone, Philadelphia, where we lived for six years. In October, 1907, I left Mills and Company and bought a tenth interest in the Shelly Sales Book Company, a manufacturing corporation in Philadelphia, at 12th and Buttonwood Streets. In January, 1908, I was made secretary and a director of the company. In the late winter of the same year F. E. Shelly, the president of the company, died. The entire management then devolved upon W. F. Woodward (Cornell, 1903) and myself. In January, 1910, we (Woodward and I) doubled the size of the Shelly Sales Book Company, occupying the whole first floor of the building. In January, 1913, the Shelly Sales Book Company bought the Oberly Sales Book Company of Brooklyn, N. Y., and at this writing we are moving that plant and our own plant to our new address, 1225-1239 Callowhill Street, Philadelphia. I am at the present time secretary, treasurer, assistant manager and a director of the company. Member: Huntingdon Valley Country Club.

Herbert Claude Kahn

Born	Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 26, 1876.
Parents	Leon, Sarah (Grauman) Kahn.
School	Shortridge High School, Indianapolis, Ind.
Years in College	1897-1898.
Degrees	A.B., 1898; LL.B., 1901; A.B. (Indiana University), 1897.
Died	Saranac Lake, N. Y., May 12, 1908.

Herbert C. Kahn entered Harvard in the fall of 1896, graduating with honors in the year 1898. During his college course he took the Boylston prize for oratory. He entered Harvard Law School in the fall of 1898, and graduated in 1901, taking his degree of LL.B. cum laude. He was also class orator. While residing in Boston, during his college course, he took an active part in settlement work, and made a special study of social science. After leaving Harvard Law School he came to the city of New York, and entered the office of Alexander and Colby as a clerk, and remained with that firm about one year. He then became connected with the office of Keatinge and Wabradt, and subsequently was associated in practice with Louis S. Phillips. During the whole time of his residence in New York he was an enthusiastic worker in the cause of the poor and unfortunate, and dwelt for a time in the University Settlement, and afterwards in the home of the Hebrew Educational Alliance. His death was nowhere more sincerely mourned than in these localities, where he had done most devoted and unselfish work. As a lawyer he displayed the same qualities of intellect which had made his college career so successful. He was loyal and devoted to the interests of his clients, energetic and persistent in the pursuit of their rights, but always tactful, kindly and considerate of the rights of others. His mind was quick and penetrating, and he had a keen perception of the legal problems presented by the case before him. In the few years of his practice his work showed ability of a high order, and gave promise of a most successful career as a member of the bar. Of handsome presence, genial and courteous manner, he had many friends, all of whom lament his untimely death.

Directly on leaving college I was employed as geologist to examine the iron ore lands under option to Jones and Laughlin's, Limited, the lands being on the Vermilion and Mesabi Iron ranges of Minnesota. I was thus employed from June, 1899, to September, 1899, when, after a short trip to examine an iron property in the Thunder Bay district of Ontario, I joined my friend, Howard Kidder, as assistant in some exploratory work for iron ore he was conducting near Ishpeming, Mich. After his death in the winter of 1899-1900 I was engaged by Jones and Laughlin's, Limited, to take charge of this work. I continued in this capacity till November, 1900, when the exploration work was discontinued, and the iron mining business being dull, I spent the winter of 1901 with a railroad surveying party in Pennsylvania. In the spring of 1901 I took the position of assistant mining engineer at the Lake Angeline Mine, Ishpeming, Mich., going to Virginia, Minn., in the fall to take the position of mining engineer for the Interstate Iron Company. Then November, 1902, I was employed as mining engineer for Pichonds, Mather and Company, at Hibbing, Minn., leaving April, 1903, to become partner and vice-president of the Carlson Exploration Company of Hibbing. January, 1905, I was elected president of the Carlson Exploration Company, holding this office till July, 1906, when I resigned to accept the position of mining engineer in charge of the Lake Superior mining operations of the New York State Steel Company of Buffalo. This position I now hold. (Second Report.)

After I was mustered out of the army with the First Heavy Artillery of Massachusetts, United States Volunteers, in the fall of 1898, I entered the Harvard Law School, and continued in Cambridge studying until the spring of 1901. I then entered the New York office of the Boston News Bureau, where I remained for a year. I was next engaged in soliciting financial advertising for various newspapers and periodicals. I spent a brief time as co-editor and manager of Trust Companies Magazine when it was first organized. I spent 1905 and 1906 studying banking. In 1907 I was financial advertising writer for various brokerage houses. During the period from 1902 to 1907 I was a contributor to a number of papers and magazines, writing on athletics and mechanical science subjects. In January, 1908, I became identified with the publishing house of D. C. Heath and Company, and in 1910 was elected a director of that corporation. That is my present occupation. Waldemar Koch

Born	St. Louis, Mo., April 8, 1875.
Parents	Arnold, Louise (Muegge) Koch.
School	Smith Academy, St. Louis, Mo.
Years in College	1897-1898.
Degrees	S.B., 1898; Ph.D., 1900.
Died	Chicago, Ill., Feb. 1, 1912.

Herman Koch, a mining engineer of international reputation, lived in Clausthal, Hannover, Germany. His father, his grandfather and his grandfather's father had been mining engineers before him. One of his nine sons was Robert Koch, the great bacteriologist; another was Hugo Koch, also a mining engineer; another, Arnold Koch, came to this country in 1867 with letters of introduction from Alfred Nobel, who was a friend of Herman Koch. Arnold Koch settled in St. Louis, where his only son, Waldemar, was born April 8, 1875.

The first part of Dr. Koch's college life was spent in Washington University, St. Louis, but his last year he spent in Harvard, from which he received his undergraduate degree, and two years later, in 1900, the degree of Ph.D. in organic chemistry. He was then for one year assistant in physiology in the Harvard Medical School with Professor Porter. He began at that time the study of the chemistry of the nervous system, which he continued until his death. He came to the University of Chicago as an associate in physiological chemistry in 1901, and with a short interregnum (1903-1906) spent in teaching pharmacology and physiological chemistry in the University of Missouri, he remained in the University of Chicago continuously thereafter, where at the time of his death he was associate professor of pharmacology. He was for a time with Schmiedeberg in Strassburg; and during his vacations he worked for several years, part of the time under a grant from the Rockefeller Institute, in the laboratory of Dr. Mott in the Claybury Asylum for the Insane, near London; afterwards for one season he was on the staff of the new hospital for the insane at Long Grove, near London; and for the past year he had been connected, also, with the Wistar Institute of Anatomy in Philadelphia. In these various institutions he had unusual opportunities, which he utilized to the utmost, for the study of pathological and normal nervous material.

Dr. Koch's work on the chemistry of the nervous system is known to all physiological chemists. The chemistry of the brain is a very difficult field and the separation of the lipid substances is still hardly possible. He spent the greater part of these years in devising accurate methods of quantitative analysis. These methods had been so perfected that he had secured more complete and more accurate quantitative analyses of nervous tissue than any hitherto made. By means of these methods he was attacking the problem of the differentiation of the brain during growth; the distribution of various substances in different parts of the brain; variations in composition during disease; and the differences between the brains of different animals. He was also engaged in separating carefully the various lipoids.

such as kephalin and lecithin, and in examining their composition. He showed the very important fact that kephalin exists as a potassium salt, whereas lecithin has more of an affinity for sodium. His method of purification of the lipoids by precipitation with chloroform and hydrochloric acid was extremely useful. Among his other important contributions must be mentioned his work on the behavior of lecithin and kephalin emulsions towards various salts, anesthetics and drugs, work which showed one way in which these substances might influence irritability. He discovered, also, that the brains of persons having the very obscure insanity, dementia præcox, contained less of a certain sulfur fraction than usual, and in his further examination of the sulfur distribution in the brain he isolated a lipoid-sulfur compound of very interesting nature. He had prepared a considerable quantity of this compound and he was engaged in studying its nature at the time of his death.

Dr. Koch's interest from the first had been in the problem of the action of drugs on the nervous system. He taught pharmacology almost from the time of his graduation. He fitted himself for his duties as a teacher by taking the regular medical courses in pathology, anatomy, embryology and many of the clinical courses, as well as by studying with Schmiedeberg in Germany. He thus had a very unusually broad training and was able to look at his subject from all sides, the chemical, the biological, and the clinical. There are very few men in pharmacology today who possess his extensive knowledge and his sane, scientific and broad point of view.

The work he was doing on the nervous system he regarded as fundamental work in pharmacology, necessary before any real science of pharmacology could be constructed. He had just reached a point when the direct application of his methods to the solution of the problem of how drugs combine with nerve cells could be begun. To die at such a time was particularly cruel. Had he lived a few years longer his recognition as one of the leading pharmacologists of the world would undoubtedly have been assured. His work, like that of his uncle, Robert Koch, was very thorough and exact, and he proceeded in logical order to overcome one difficulty after another.

Dr. Koch's personality won him many friends. He was a true, loyal and courageous friend, entirely honest and of sane judgment; he avoided making enemies, as far as possible. He was fond of out of doors, and loved the hills, rivers and fields, and tramping in the dunes near Chicago was his main recreation. He had a keen appreciation of what was fine in music and in art. His was an open, frank, kindly nature, considerate of others and slow to anger.

His death by pneumonia, February 1st, at the early age of thirty-six, was an irreparable loss to his friends, to his University and to science.

After leaving college I engaged for a time in the commercial paper brokerage business in St. Louis, and later in the real estate business for several years in my native city, operating largely on my own account. In 1905 I removed to Chicago, where I lived for two years. There two of my children were born, and in August, 1907, I moved my family and all my household goods to Seattle, where I have since resided. In the autumn of 1908 I engaged in the art business in the latter city, and have continued in that business until now. My two younger children were born in this city, and I shall probably continue to make this place my permanent residence. Nothing of great moment has happened to me, and there is very little for me to chronicle about myself. I endeavor to get back East and renew old acquaintances and associations every year or two, and probably shall always do that as long as I live in the West. I am still very much interested in my old home, St. Louis, and in Boston and Cambridge, where I have relatives and where I still have many interests that draw me. This western country has a strong hold upon my imagination, and it is my intention to bring up my children here. It is my hope that they may receive the final touches to their education in the eastern centres, where I had the good fortune to spend a number of happy years, and it is especially my hope that my two sons may go to Harvard and imbibe the great traditions and culture of my alma mater. Member: Municipal League, Harvard Club, Fine Arts Association, all of Seattle.

Having finished in three years the necessary number of courses for the degree of A.B., the faculty granted me leave of absence for one year. I spent part of my fourth year in the study of law and part in travelling in Europe, entering the law school of the University of Michigan in September, 1897, and departing for a trip abroad in the following March. I arrived home from Europe Class Day, 1898, and remained in Cambridge Commencement week, securing my diploma with the rest of the class. The summer of 1898 was spent in the summer school of the University of Michigan. In the fall of 1899 I entered the Detroit Law School, an evening institution, so that I might be in an office during the day. I graduated with the bachelor's degree in June, 1900, but in the meantime had put in fourteen months in a bank, as the law did not appeal to me. In January, 1901, I abandoned the bank and also all thought of the law and started in to learn journalism as a cub reporter on the Detroit Journal. I remained with the Journal eleven years, during nine of which I was dramatic and musical editor. During my eleven years with the Journal I was also at various times sporting editor, literary editor, woman's page editor, city editor and assistant managing editor. In January, 1912, I joined the staff of the MacManus Company, advertising agents, as a writer of various kinds of copy, taking an interest in the business and a place on the board of directors. Upon the mustering out of the regiment I continued my work in the Harvard Law School, and in the fall of 1898 and while in the Law School was elected a member of the Boston common council, and served in that body during the years 1899 and 1900. Just after my graduation from the Law School I was elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives, and served with that body during the years 1901 and 1902. In 1902 I retired, as I supposed, from politics and entered upon the practice of law in the office of the late Charles F. Donnelly, with offices at 54 Ames Building, and in November, 1907, opened up offices for myself in Barristers Hall, where I still am. In November, 1905, I was elected senator from South Boston, and served in the Massachusetts State Senate during the year 1906, and in the fall of that year ran for Congress and was defeated for the Democratic nomination. In 1899 I withdrew from the militia of the state, but reëntered it again in 1901 as a second lieutenant in A Company of the Ninth Regiment, and served with that company as second lieutenant, first lieutenant and captain, and during 1909 and 1910 was aide-de-camp upon the staff of Governor Draper. Harvard somehow got into my system, and I have not yet succeeded in getting it out. First I tried studying a year at the University of Pennsylvania, and returned to study (1899-1900) at Harvard. Then I tried a year of Europe, and returned to study two years more at Harvard. At that point (1903) the G. and C. Merriam Company induced me to come to Springfield, Mass., to help make over Webster's International Dictionary. They placed in my hands the departments of Middle English and dialect words: therefore a Ph.D.

seemed in keeping. I took the examination in 1906. That almost did the business. For a year I recuperated, teaching at Bryn Mawr. Then the work on Webster forced me again to the Harvard Library, the best place in the world for lexicographical research. After two years I found, however, that dictionaries have an unpleasant way of ending with Z: there seems to be no et cetera. So here I settled down in 1909 as instructor in English. As my wife has the same proper view, we are training three lusty sons for 1925, 1926 and 1930. Books and articles which I have written: Spenser's Rosalind (Anglia, 1908), Spenser and Lady Cary (Modern Language Review, 1908), Spenser's Sir Calidore (Englische Studien, 1910), Spenser's Sonnets "as Published" (Modern Language Review, 1911), The Purport of Lyly's Endimion (Modern Language Association Publications, 1909), Lyly's Endimion: an Addendum (Modern Philology, 1911), English Dictionaries before Webster (American Bibliographical Society Publications, 1909), From Troilus to Euphues (Memorial Volume, 1913). In the autumn of 1898 I went to work in the Cripple Creek district for the Colorado Electric Power Company, one of the first long-distance power transmission companies in the country. I held the fine position of apprentice wireman with them until the following April, when I got a better job, electrician at the Strickler Tunnel, which was then being driven through a shoulder of Pike's Peak as a part of the Colorado Springs water works. In July, 1899, I entered the summer school of surveying of the Columbia School of Mines, and remained in Columbia until February, 1902, when I received my degree of Engineer of Mines. I then became assistant to the chief engineer of the Woods Investment Company, who were operating extensively in the Cripple Creek district. I left them during the following summer, and after a few odd jobs took a trip abroad. In the early spring of 1903 I was resident engineer for the Newfoundland Slate Company, at their quarry on Trinity Bay, Newfoundland. I returned to the United States about the end of the year. Since then I have had headquarters in Colorado Springs, but have been engaged in examining and operating mines, mostly in the various western states, occasionally also in Alaska, Mexico, Wisconsin, Michigan, Alabama, and Ontario. During the summer of 1911 I was one of J. R. Finlay's assistants in the appraisal of all the mining property in Michigan for the board of state tax commissioners. I have been, and am, a director of several mining companies and consulting engineer to some of them, but have never held any public office. I have written a few short articles in technical magazines. Work expresses the idea. First I tumbled into street railway trucks. Then I landed on street-car track work, with trucks on the side, and patent office drawing for the Lorain Steel Company at Johnstown, Pa., as a relaxation. Through it all I became able to stand on the streets of any town in the eastern United States and tell who made the cars, who furnished the trucks and electric equipment, and who fabricated the special track work. To increase my knowledge, the company sent me on trips to Boston and so far west as Milwaukee to look things over. As my press agent was a wretched one, there was not too much money in that, so I eloped with myself to a structural steel plant. At first it was very interesting; but having worked on buildings ranging in size from a crane cage to the forty-story municipal building for New York City, and on bridges varying from a steel beam over a rut to the Blackwell's Island Bridge and the Quebec Cantilever, the excitement consists of guessing how the purchaser's engineer interprets his specifications. As for office, I did have the desire to run for school director, but as the voters did not want me, they voted for another fellow. Member: Harrisburg Lodge, No. 629; Perseverance, R. A. Chapter, No. 21; Harrisburg Council, No. 7, Royal Arcanum, all of Pennsylvania.

After leaving college went to the Harvard Medical School for four years, graduating in 1902. I then spent eighteen months as house officer in the Carney Hospital, Boston, leaving there and going to New York City, where I was resident house surgeon in the New York Lying-in Hospital until May, 1904. After a short vacation I took up the practice of medicine in New York City, and have, I believe, been more than ordinarily fortunate in my success. I occupied myself in general practice until about four years ago, since which time I have devoted myself entirely to my specialty, obstetrics and gynecology. I am one of the attending surgeons to the Society of the Lying-in Hospital of the city of New York, consulting obstetrician to the Port Chester Hospital, and am associate in practice with one of New York's foremost medical men. During the past few years I have been president, vice-president and secretary of a number of medical societies. Perhaps the most flattering and certainly the most enjoyable office that I have held is that of president of the Harvard Medical Society of New York City, which has been my good fortune for two years past. If I had things to do over again, I should make no change in the essential factors which go to make up my life, as I feel that I am doing the thing which I like best. I am happily married, and the outlook for the future seems bright. I have written a large number of technical articles on subjects concerning my specialty, obstetrics and gynecology. These have been published in various medical journals. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Players Club of New York, Massachusetts Medical Society, New York State Medical Society, American Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, American Medical Association, New York Academy of Medicine, and a large number of local medical societies.

Directly after my graduation in 1898 I was chosen instructor in Oberlin Academy, the preparatory school connected with the college at Oberlin, Ohio. I remained in that position for three years, not only teaching but taking additional studies in the college, with the intention of returning to Harvard for the Master of Arts degree. After a year in a private school at St. Paul, Minn., I spent six successful years teaching in the high school at Haverhill, Mass. Died	Winchester, Mass., Sept. 7, 1912.

Howard Curry Mason died at his home, 11 Lloyd Street, Winchester, on September 7, 1912. His death was caused by uræmia of only a few days' duration, coming on top of a chronic valvular heart trouble which he had had for several years. In spite of this severe handicap of a weakened heart, which he felt would be the cause of his death, he was much interested in his work. His friends had much difficulty to make him realize his limitations. His greatest success was in extra-illustrating high-grade historic and other literary works, and in this special work he became an expert. His memory was remarkable. His tastes were always simple, and he disliked ostentation of any kind. His greatest happiness he found with his family, consisting of a wife and three children. He had just returned from a most enjoyable vacation in Maine when this fatal illness took him away.

This is no place for the annals of the quietist, short and simple though they be. It is hard to see, in the case of such an individual, why the entry "nothing doing" is not, for the purposes of the digest, as perfectly proper and unexceptionable in form as it is literally true in fact. Thus there is an entire uneventful decade, after 1898 (with one exception), during which I studied landscape architecture at Harvard and entered the profession, which I still follow as a "working man" in the recent comprehensive sense of that term, being at present connected with the office of Olmsted Brothers, Brookline, Mass. The exception referred to was my experience in 1902 in being suddenly and violently caught up by the tremendous tide of the foreign missionary enterprise which all but bore me away. If my acquaintance with that gulf stream had only been made when I was an undergraduate, I should undoubtedly have taken up educational work on the other side of the world. 1908 was the year of the Decennial, but I was unamannerly enough to start off on a three months' maiden trip to Europe just as the class was about to sit down at that solemn feast. Perhaps my pains as a solitary traveller I suffered by way of penalty. A curious thing happened on the voyage over. One day, exactly in the middle of the Atlantic and exactly on the axis line of the ship at the tip of the stern, two speeding promenaders, rounding the deck-house, bumped into each other's arms. I got one of the bumps and A. H. Newhall got the other. He had merely condescended to the second cabin deck to see what manner of creatures were there. I believe we haven't seen each other since we left the ship. The vision of Europe was an overwhelming experience to me and in many ways marks, so to speak, a new calendar series in my life. It constituted one of the main factors in the radical reconstruction of my intellectual world which had been for some time in process. I was, in fact, enrolled in a sort of "University of Polite Unlearning," as described by Dr. Crothers, and I took a pretty complete course. I can't help wondering whether the rapid and astonishing changes in the University since our day have been relatively as significant as mine. In the meantime I have acquired several new hobbies that are very troublesome to care for now that they are on my hands, but which I can't bring myself to throw over. In general, I am about equally devoted to ethical and æsthetic fields. A queer combination, apparently, despite their theoretically close relationship, and one that has many practical drawbacks. There remains one fact which I suppose ought to be set down as a matter of record. In March, 1909, I passed through the hardest experience of my life in the sudden death of my only brother and only other child of the family, William Harold Millard, 1899, in Shanghai, China, after a seven years' absence and first separation from home, following his ordination "to the gospel ministry among the nations." That undreamed-of event has changed the face of the world for me and immeasurably deepened its mystery.

Born St. Louis, Mo., July 30, 1875.
Parents Thomas Perry, Mary Amelia (Glenn) Morse.
School Smith Academy, St. Louis, Mo.; Mr. Stowell's School, Lexington, Mass.
Years in College 1891-1893. 1895-1898.
Degrees A.B., 1898; S.T.B., 1901.

Address All Saints Rectory, West Newbury, Mass.

For three years after leaving college (September, 1898, to June, 1901) I studied at the Episcopal Theological School of Cambridge, graduating June 19, 1901. I was ordained deacon by the Bishop of Massachusetts on June 19, 1901, in St. John's Chapel, Cambridge. September 1, 1901, I became curate at St. Anne's Church, Lowell. May 23, 1902, I was ordained priest by the Bishop of Massachusetts in St. Peter's Church, Cambridge. September 1, 1902, I became one of the clergy staff at St. Stephen's Church, Boston, and vicar of St. James' Church, West Somerville, where I held services on Sundays. January 12, 1903, I was elected rector of St. James' Church, West Somerville, working there two days a week and devoting the other five days to settlement work at St. Stephen's, Boston. March 1, 1904, I severed connection with St. Stephen's Church, Boston, and removed to West Somerville, devoting my time to St. James'

Church until February 1, 1908, when I became senior curate at the Church of the Advent, Boston, where I served for one year. During the summer of 1909 I was acting chaplain of the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. After that I did Sunday supply work and devoted my week days to special study, until the first of November, 1910, when I undertook the founding of a parish and building of a church in West Newbury, Mass. My forefathers settled in this vicinity in 1635, and three of my direct ancestors were among the twenty-two men who built an Episcopal church in 1711 and founded the oldest parish in Massachusetts,—St. Paul's Newburyport; of which one of my family, Rev. James Morse, D.D. (Harvard, 1800), was rector from 1803 to 1842. So I wished to be the one to build up this new parish. The work has prospered beyond our expectations and has proved a great blessing to this community. Our beautiful church, All Saints, is a perpendicular gothic structure of brick and stone. The first services were held in it at Easter, 1913. Bishop Lawrence is to consecrate it June 8, 1913. We have a fine brick parish house and a beautiful rectory, where I am always glad to welcome 1898 men. We have a seventy-thousand-dollar endowment and, what is best of all, a congregation of faithful men, women and children devoted to the Church. In this peaceful, beautiful Merrimack valley I lead an ideal country life. The offices I hold are: rector of All Saints Church, West Newbury; director of the Young Men's Christian Association; vice-president and director of the Historical Society of Old Newbury, Newburyport; director and treasurer of the Newburyport Chapter of Dummer Allies. Member: Massachusetts Catholic Club, Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of Newburyport, American Drama League, Drama League of Boston, Copley Society, Da Vinci Club, Dalton Club of Newburyport, American Peace Society, National Geographical Society, Boston Society of Arts and Crafts, Society of Colonial Wars, Sons of the American Revolution, Bibliophile Society, Brothers of the Book.

After leaving Cambridge in June, 1898, I devoted myself exclusively to having a good time during that summer, and in October went to work. On the first of January, 1899, I was admitted as a partner in my father's firm, where I have been in the banking business with him and my brother, who is a member of Harvard, 1889. In 1900 I married Emma Adler, who is a sister of Herman M. Adler, Harvard, 1897. Probably the simplest way to give a narrative of my life since then is to say that I am still married and still in business. Besides the above-mentioned occupations, I continue to be interested in music, golf and billiards. To these hobbies I devote a great deal of time, and with perseverance hope to acquire proficiency in them, so that I can give a favorable report when our twenty-fifth celebration comes around. After receiving the degrees of B.A.S. and S.B. in 1897 and 1898, he left Harvard University and entered the office of Kendall, Taylor and Stevens, architects, where he was employed for several months. Upon leaving their office he travelled through Europe during the summer of 1899 with several friends, studying architecture and landscape architecture in the countries of England, France, Switzerland and Italy. Returning from this tour, he entered the employ of Lockwood, Greene and Company, mill architects and mill engineers. After about a year's service in this office he received an appointment as acting assistant superintendent of the Boston park department, leaving that department six months later for a position of wider possibilities with the Plymouth Cordage Company, the latter part of 1900. With the Plymouth Cordage Company he took charge of the architectural and civil engineering department. Through this department have been built most of their large mills and store houses at Plymouth and the supervision of their new plant at Welland, Ontario. To the architectural and engineering department has been added the social department known as "welfare work," or "industrial betterment," taking up the improvement of grounds, better housing of the employees, dining hall, library, etc. This department has been developed to such an extent that they were awarded a gold medal at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis, a gold medal at the Lewis and Clark Exposition at Portland, Ore., and a gold medal from the state of Massachusetts at the Lewis and Clark Exposition. He is at present employed by the Plymouth Cordage Company in looking after the architecture, engineering, landscape architecture and social institutions at its works at North Plymouth, Mass., and Welland, Ontario. (Second Report.)

Address	(home) 21 Atlantic Terrace, Lynn, Mass. (business) 38 Exchange St., Lynn, Mass.

On leaving the Law School I entered the office of Hale and Grinnell, Boston, where I remained for about a year. Meanwhile I formed a partnership at Lynn with Samuel H. Hollis and William E. Dorman, both of the Class of 1898, under the firm name of Hollis, Dorman and Newhall. By the withdrawal of Mr. Hollis soon after, the firm became Dorman and Newhall, as it has remained ever since. For some time we maintained two offices, one in Boston and one in Lynn, but now have only one, at Lynn. I have busied myself out of office hours in various local interests, but have not gone much into politics, leaving that end for my partner. I did, however, serve two terms in the common council, prior to the adoption of a commission form of government in Lynn; but since being legislated out of office by that change, have made no attempt to return. I have for some years lectured on the rule against perpetuities in the Evening Law School in Boston, and my partner and I have charge of the department of business law at the School of Commerce and Finance in Boston. Since my last report life has moved along in the same uneventful manner as before, except for my marriage in 1907. My life since leaving the Law School is best characterized by the old saying, "Happy is the country whose annals are uninteresting." My Crocker's Notes on Common Forms has passed its fifth edition. Member: Oxford Club of Lynn, Damascus Lodge of Masons of Lynn.

Address	347 Essex St., Salem, Mass.

After graduation at college I became a clerk in a banking house in Boston. After about a year I decided to give up the idea of a business career and to take up music as a life work. I returned to college for work in the Graduate School (music), 1900-1901. After this I spent a year in England in the study of church music, piano and organ playing, and composition under the instruction of the organist of Chester Cathedral, to whom during this time I was assistant deputy organist, and have since revisited England three times for further study during the summer. Together with recital work and the position of organist at two different churches, I am now giving lessons in various branches of music. In the fall of 1898 I entered the Harvard Graduate School, expecting to take the degree of A.M. in 1899; but the offer of a position in the public high school of Danville, Ill., and the prospect of earning my own living thereby, induced me to leave Cambridge about Christmas time, 1898. After two years of teaching and six months of travelling for a school supply house of Chicago, I entered the insurance business in Cambridge, becoming junior partner in the firm of A. M. Stewart and Company. In 1908 I entered the Harvard Law School, was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1910, and have since been practising in Cambridge. I think that I have at last reached a state of equilibrium and that I will be found among the profession as long as I can behave myself properly and pay my bills. My record in public life has been immaculate. I never ran for anything, and never had anything handed out to me. My community evidently appreciates the excellent service I am rendering by remaining in private life. Member: Economy Club of Cambridge, Boston City Club.

Business	Lawyer.
Address	(home) 1213 Astor St., Chicago, Ill. (business) Room 701, 112 West Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

On leaving college in 1898 I returned to Chicago, which has always been my home. In the fall of that year I entered the law school of Northwestern University, from which I obtained the degree of LL.B. in 1901. The next six years were spent in the law office of Otis and Graves, and later of E. A. Otis. My experiences there, while varied, could hardly be called sensational, and were probably not unlike those of most lawyers beginning practice. From 1907 to 1911 I was an assistant corporation counsel of the City of Chicago. During this time I not only learned something about municipal law, but also had a chance to see at close quarters the various ways in which the chosen representatives of the people handle the job of running a city. From 1911 to 1913 I was alone in general practice. Recently I have become one of the attorneys for the Middle West Utilities Company, which has been organized for the purpose of acquiring and operating public utilities in a large number of the smaller cities and towns of Illinois and adjoining states. During the past two years I have had much pleasure in helping to manage the scholarships at Cambridge which are maintained by the Harvard Club of Chicago. To satisfy the Secretary's thirst for information, I may add that no offices of honor or trust have as yet sought me out, and that I have neither written nor translated any books or plays. Member: University Club of Chicago, Saddle and Cycle Club of Chicago, Law Club of Chicago, Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States.

In September, 1898, I went to Cincinnati, Ohio, as instructor in French and German in the University of Cincinnati. I taught there until September, 1900, when I went to St. Louis, Mo., to teach French in the Central High School. I remained in this school until June, 1905, when I resigned and went back to my home in Worcester, Mass. During my stay in St. Louis I studied law in the law school of Washington University, and received the degree of LL.B. in June, 1903. I was admitted to the bar of Missouri and also of Massachusetts in this same year. On my return to Worcester in June, 1905, I became a benedict and shortly afterward opened an office for the practice of law in the State Mutual Building in Worcester. As the enforced idleness of the young practitioner of law did not agree with my health, I threw up the law business and came to New York in February, 1906, and took up the position of teacher of French in the Stuyvesant High School, and I have been there ever since. In the spring of 1907 I built a house at Plandome, on Manhasset Bay, Long Island, and here are growing up two lusty boys, who, I trust, will some day become two loyal sons of Harvard. At present I am serving my second term as a trustee of the village of Plandome,—my only public office. Member: Plandome Yacht Club.

I rather think each of my previous narratives has begun, "I am still in the cotton business." Well, I still am rather more so than when last recorded, and the gentleman farmer's life to which I some day hope to attain doesn't seem to get any nearer. I have been married nearly eight years and have a couple of nice little daughters, six and four, the older of whom has already acquired an aversion for Yale. I am still the only man in the house except for the gentleman dog my wife and I went to housekeeping with. I have always taken a good deal of interest in church matters, and have held down various jobs in connection with them, and still do to some extent. Address	(home) Lawrence, Long Island, N. Y. (business) 66 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

There is little to add to the story of my life as it appeared in the Second Report published at the Decennial, as my career in the interim has been singularly uneventful. Not to clog the record unduly, I may briefly repeat that after graduating with our class I entered the Columbia law school, and took the degree of LL.B. there in 1901. I found time to take a few extra courses in the graduate school, but could not get away with any other degrees. I was admitted to the

New York bar in January, 1902, and entered the office of McCurdy and Yard, 66 Broadway, where I have been ever since. During the five years after I left Cambridge circumstances required me to spend a great deal of my time in Europe. Some of my family at that time were living in Germany. I travelled a great deal and saw a great deal more of the world than I suppose I ever shall again. On July 11, 1903, I was married, and in the following spring went to live at Lawrence, Long Island, where I still am. I have built a house there, and hope to remain during good behavior. In June, 1905, I was elected police justice of Lawrence, and held the office for five years, resigning because of the pressure of other work. I have not written any books or plays yet, but this may not be my fault as I have not lived in the West since I was very young. Since "offices of honor or trust" are called for, I may remark that I had the pleasure of serving one term as president of the alumni association of the Cutler School. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Rockaway Hunting Club, Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club of Oyster Bay, New York Athletic Club; also several hunting and fishing clubs, including the Mark Rock Club of Maryland, Flanders Club of Long Island, Tahawus Club (in the Adirondacks), Winchester Club and Laurentian Club (in Quebec); Holland Lodge, No. 8, of New York City.

After graduation from Harvard College I remained in the Harvard Graduate School until June, 1901, studying mathematics. I then went into business, managing a market for a while, but began the study of accounting in 1903. In February of 1905 I became head bookkeeper for the Theodore Metcalf Company, wholesale, retail and manufacturing druggists. In 1908 I resigned that position to take up public accounting, as I had planned, and became associated with Waldron H. Rand (whose son, Waldron H. Rand, Jr., is not unknown to 1898 men). I have remained with Mr. Rand ever since, and became his partner in October, 1912. I took (and passed) the first examination for accountants ever given in Massachusetts, in 1909. On leave of absence during 1897-1898, I entered the Harvard Medical School. Took my A.B. with the class in 1898 and my M.D. in 1901. From July, 1901, to January, 1903, I served as interne at the Massachusetts State Hospital, and in January, 1903, was appointed assistant physician at the

Massachusetts Hospital for Dipsomaniacs and Inebriates in Foxboro. In May, 1903, I began private practice in Winchester, where I have since lived. In October, 1904, I was married to Miss M. B. Mitchell, a Smith (1896) girl, and two children keep the old man hustling to catch up with the high cost of living, not to speak of the high cost of dying, though occasionally a patient seems to prefer the latter to the former. Since 1905, when I was asked by the school committee to serve as the first to fill the new position of school physician, and to devise and carry on the work, which was at that time in operation in very few towns or cities in the country, I have continued to serve in that position. I am in general practice, which offers little in the way of spectacular events to chronicle here. Sometimes I think the greatest events are buying shoes for the kids and for the automobile. Charles E. Reber spent only one year at Harvard and that was as a graduate student in the department of English. In the fall of 1898 he took up his work at Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa., as professor of English. Remaining in this position only one year, he spent the two following years as a graduate student in the University of Pennsylvania, devoting himself to the study of English, pedagogy and psychology. The two years following were occupied in the Tri-State College, Angola, Ind., as professor of psychology and education. The next year, 1903-1904, he taught psychology in the Cumberland Valley State Normal School, Shippensburg, Pa. At this time he was assigned to a fellowship in psychology and education in Clark University, Worcester, Mass., which he held for two years. Accident now turned his attention to a very congenial field of activity, namely, that of public-school education. Three years and six months were occupied in the principalship of a

In September, 1898, I entered the Harvard Graduate School, taking my A.M. in Germanic languages the following June. The next fall I received an appointment as assistant in German at Harvard, and have been teaching German ever since that time, until 1904 in Cambridge and for the past eight years at Tufts College. In June, 1910, I received an appointment as assistant professor of modern languages, a title which I owe to the fact that for three years I taught one class in Spanish in addition to my work in German. In June, 1912, I was elected recording secretary of the faculty. I have spent four summer vacations abroad, making Germany the objective point of each trip. To a lesser extent I have indulged my globe-trotting propensities also in the United States and Canada. The daily routine of teaching I find as enjoyable to-day as it was in the beginning. I think I may say truthfully that never for a day, or even for an hour, have I regretted choosing educational work for my profession. I have written: A Vocabulary of German Words and Idioms (Tufts College Press, October, 1912). Member: Bostoner Deutsche Gesellschaft, Boston Young Men's Christian Union, Unitarian Club of Boston.

In the fall of 1898 I went to St. Paul, Minn., and remained there two years as assistant in the Barnard School for Boys. During 1900 and 1901 I was at the Choate School, Wallingford, Conn. In September, 1901, I was married to Miss Gertrude A. Hutchings, a former schoolmate. We went at once to Derry, N. H., where we spent the next eleven years. From 1901 to 1909 I was a master at Pinkerton Academy, Derry, and from 1909 to 1912 I served the district as superintendent of schools. During our residence in Derry five children were born to us, two girls and three boys. In the fall of 1912 we returned to our native state, where I am now serving as principal of the high school in Biddeford,

Maine. Like most school-men, I have had a busy but uneventful life. Our work is full of opportunities for doing good, and a large portion of its reward must come from the satisfaction that proceeds from serving honorably in an honorable service. I left Harvard in 1899 after receiving my master's degree with the intention of returning and studying further, having in mind to take the doctor's degree in English and to make teaching my profession. During the summer a business venture of considerable promise was opened to me through my uncle, B. D. Rising of Springfield, who organized a new company for the manufacture of fine writing papers at Housatonic, in Berkshire County, Massachusetts. For the last six or seven years I have been with this concern, the first year in the Springfield office and since then in active work at the mills. On February 23, 1904, I was married to Mary Louise Parmelee in Plymouth Church, Syracuse, N. Y. Miss Parmelee was a graduate of Syracuse University. Since our marriage we have lived in Housatonic. While I have devoted myself principally to business, I have found time to do some literary work, and have delivered a number of lectures, principally on subjects drawn from the Elizabethan period. (Second Report.)

I was a member of the Great Barrington school committee from 1908 to 1910. I was a founder, and president of the South Berkshire University Club from 1907 to 1910.

Most of Dr. Rice's time subsequent to leaving the Medical School and hospital service has been spent in travel and exploration, largely in South America and particularly in the vicinity of the Orinoco and Amazon rivers, where it is rumored he has seen some strange sights. Whether or not this is so cannot at this time be either confirmed or denied, as it is impossible to find anybody who has ever been to the places where Dr. Rice insists he has been. An interesting feature of his work in South America is a frequent newspaper report to the effect that he has been eaten by cannibals or has been a victim of the snakes which are said to be laying for him all the time. So far they haven't gotten him, and if we designate "Ham" as "some dodger" we sum up in concise form about the only present available connected narrative there is of him covering the entire period which has elapsed since leaving Harvard. He holds no offices of honor or trust, either in this country or South America, so far as we know, although there was an unofficial report at one time that he had been crowned King of the Orinoco River. Until we are shown the royal head-dress, however, we must assume that he is still an ordinary God-fearing citizen like the rest of us. He has written various articles on travels in South America, published in the Royal Geographical Magazine, etc. Member: Royal Geographical Society, American Geographical Society, Harvard Travellers Club, Harvard Club of New York, University Club of New York, Tennis and Racquet Club of Boston, Tavern Club of Boston.

In the autumn of 1898 I began work as a master at the Groton School, and have occupied the same position ever since. I have spent most of my summers assisting my father in the management of his summer camp for boys at North

Belgrade, Maine. One summer I spent in England and Scotland, and in 1904-1905 I enjoyed my first sabbatical year studying in Munich and travelling in Europe and Egypt. The two principal events in my life have been my marriage, in June, 1910, and the birth of my son. He promises to be a useful member of the class of 1933 or thereabouts. I am at present spending my second sabbatical in Europe, with my small family. We had about four months in Rome, and are advancing on Paris and London by slow stages. My only regret about this year abroad is that it will prevent me from attending the Quindecennial "party." I had previously, in October, 1900, been admitted to the bar of New York State. In October, 1901, I began to practise law, and entered the office of Strong and Cadwalader. I stayed with this firm until February, 1902, when I entered the office of Masten and Nichols, my present firm, with whom I have been connected ever since. I became a member of the firm July 1, 1909. In November, 1903, I was nominated for member of the New York City board of aldermen on the Republican ticket, was elected, and served one term, from January 1, 1904, to January 1, 1906. In November, 1906, I was nominated for member of the New York State Assembly, again on the Republican ticket, and was elected. I was renominated and reelected in each of the two succeeding years, and served three terms in all, for the years 1907, 1908 and 1909, respectively. In 1909, to my great regret, press of law work made it impossible for me to accept a renomination, and I have not been in office since that date. I have, however, tried to keep in touch with politics, and have been for the past two years president of my district club, which position I still hold. I entered the Harvard Medical School with considerable enthusiasm, having experienced a keen desire to enter the profession of surgery since my freshman year at college. During the usual four years of Medical School training I did not regret having adhered to the academic course at college, not having taken an unusual number of courses in chemistry and zoölogy, which are thought by some undergraduates to be essential for medical training. I sacrificed much of the routine Medical School training in many subjects by carrying on hospital work during my school term. In many ways this was an advantage, particularly in my training in surgery. I have learned, however, that a specialist must not sacrifice his last opportunity to learn something of all diseases before entering a specialty. While in the Harvard Medical School I served as head prosector in the anatomy department for three years. I was appointed surgical interne for eighteen months' service at the Massachusetts General Hospital. During this service, which was the pleasantest part of my career thus far, I served as senior house officer to the late Charles T. Porter. Though appointed as interne at the Boston Lying-in Hospital, I sacrificed this opportunity to become a surgical assistant to Dr. C. A. Porter and W. A. Brooks. My association for six years with Dr. Brooks was profitable, not only from a surgical standpoint, but because of the inspiration to work hard and to succeed which this ex-football captain has enthused into many young medical men. I spent the first five years after graduating from the hospital living the usual humdrum life of a young surgeon of the Back Bay, assisting other surgeons and clamoring in the meanwhile for any unfortunate human being who might enter my office with a surgical trouble. Discovering that this diminutive surgical practice was not giving me a place in the profession, I attempted to contribute something to the progress of surgery by laboratory investigations on animals. My work was confined to some two hundred and fifty experiments to improve the technique of operating within the chest cavity. I published several papers reporting the results of my experimental work, including the description of different forms of apparatus which I contrived to maintain the inflation of the lungs during such operations. An appointment on the surgical staff of the Massachusetts General Hospital then gave me an opportunity to continue the surgery of the chest on human beings. Through the courtesy and sacrifice of the senior members of the staff I was given the opportunity to operate on some one hundred and fifty patients afflicted with diseases of the chest. I published fifteen papers on the subject, which introduced me to many surgeons throughout the country, and gave me an opportunity to see that the practice of surgery should not consist in developing a large private clientele alone, but in keeping in touch with the general progress of surgery throughout the country and in Europe, and by contributing also my own share. I was fortunate enough to marry a young woman who shared this point of view regarding surgical success. In making a less strenuous effort to accumulate patients I doubtless sacrificed income. This was well made up, however, by the gratification of recognition from different parts of the country of my interest in chest surgery. Through the interest of Dr. John Collins Warren and the help of the Laboratory of Surgical Research of the Harvard Medical School, I spent four months in Marburg. I rejoice that I went to Germany with a definite purpose in view: to study chest surgery with three men who were already familiar with that subject. It is gratifying to see that the old custom of going to Europe after graduating from the Medical School in order to complete one's training has been given up. On returning to America I found myself being more identified with this subject, and gradually increased my number of private consultations, indicating that I was, at least by some physicians, regarded as in a way a specialist. Realizing that my ambition was to hold eventually a position in the surgical department of some university, I found myself in need of a more extensive training in general surgery in preparation for continuing special work. I therefore made up my mind that before the age of forty I would have fitted myself in this respect. I then began to look about for an opportunity to perform a larger number of general surgical operations, and saw its impossibility in my position at the Massachusetts General Hospital as one of a staff of nineteen surgeons. At the crucial moment I was offered a position by Dr. James G. Mumford as assistant director and surgeon to the Clifton Springs Sanitarium and Hospital in New York State. It was a difficult task to make up my mind to make a radical change at the time when my general prospects in Boston were good. Nevertheless I resigned my appointment at the hospital and an appointment in the teaching department of the Harvard Medical School, and gave up a fair surgical practice and my consultation work in thoracic surgery, and came on the first of October to Clifton Springs. My salary is sufficient to provide a comfortable living for my family. Meanwhile I am in complete charge of a private surgical clinic, and receiving an experience in general operative work which I could not obtain in the same time in Boston. I am continuing my interest in chest surgery, and am writing a book. At the end of a number of years I hope to be fitted to accept a position in the surgical department of some university, inasmuch as my training by that time will consist not only in experience, in laboratory research work, but in a broad general training as well. If I am successful in obtaining such a position, I shall continue to do special work and consultation work in surgery of the heart, lungs and œsophagus. In my associations with James G. Mumford in reorganizing this institution and in developing a private hospital where coöperative surgery and medicine are in vogue, I find myself entirely contented. I have written fifteen papers on the subject of Surgery of the Lungs and Heart. Member: Tennis and Racquet Club of Boston, Massachusetts Medical Society, New York Medical Society.

PAUL DANIEL ROONEY

Francis Solano (Paul Daniel) Rooney

Born	Quincy, Ill., Sept. 17, 1877.
Parents	Michael, Abby Luella (Fox) Rooney.
School	St. Francis Solanus College, Quincy, Ill.; St. Louis University, St. Louis, Mo.
Years in College	1896-1898.
Degrees	A.B., 1898; A.B. (St. Francis Solanus, Ill.), 1895; A.B. (St. Louis Univ.), 1896.
Died	Santa Barbara, Cal., May 24, 1906.

Although Father Francis Solano Rooney was but twenty-nine years old at his death, it would be hard to find any one twice that age who left so numerous a circle of friends, or created a wider influence by his unique personality. Paul Daniel Rooney was born at Quincy, Ill., September 17, 1877, being the son of Dr. Michael Rooney, a well-known physician of Quincy, and Dr. Abby Fox Rooney. He was noted even as a child for his diligence and accuracy in study. In the Franciscan college of St. Francis Solanus, at Quincy, Ill., where he studied from 1891 to 1895, the seed was sown of that ideal which dominated his intensely active life of alternate study and practical charity, the ideal of the sublime Poverello of Assisi. While there, and at St. Louis University, from which he was graduated in 1896, Paul Rooney showed, by his diligence and participation in almost every form of college activity, that he would leave no stone unturned to educate himself, especially along sociological lines, and so be thoroughly equipped when ready to sound by personal experience the real problems of poverty. During his two years at Harvard, 1896-1898, he became an active worker both for the Associated Charities and for the St. Vincent de Paul Society. While residing in Cambridge with his mother, he devoted two nights each week to visiting and relieving, with the means afforded him by these societies, the destitute poor of Boston. Those who attended the meetings of the Student Volunteer Association, held at Paul Rooney's house, will not easily forget that frail, timid-looking boy, so unwilling to push himself forward, but who spoke with such enthusiasm and dry humor and practical wisdom about a field which he had thoroughly explored. During his stay at Harvard he had utilized the time snatched from his studies to study the workings of practically every penal and charitable institution in or near Boston.

Rooney was not a sentimentalist. His mind was acute, calm and singularly tolerant, and the cool decision with which he availed himself of every chance to study and discuss and explore while at Harvard guided him in pursuing unswervingly the ideal that he loved so passionately, a life of voluntary poverty devoted to active and practical charity. It was not an academic interest that impelled him; he loved the poor as his brothers in Christ, and showed his genuineness by marked unselfishness and courtesy toward his acquaintances at college.

After his graduation Paul Rooney returned to his old home at Quincy, Ill., where he devoted himself to the study of psychology, ethics and Hebrew. In June, 1899, St. Francis Solanus College conferred on him the master's degree. In May he delivered his first public speech, a Memorial Day address before the children of the Adams public school. Soon after his return from Harvard the mayor of Quincy had appointed him a director of the Free Public Library, a position which he held until the summer of 1899, when he felt at last free to carry out his long-cherished plan. After saying farewell to his relatives and friends, he left home for Teutopolis, Ill., to enter the novitiate of the Order of Friars Minor (the Order of St. Francis). Together with the habit of the Order he received the name of Francis Solano. The year of novitiate was devoted to the study of the rules and obligations of the Franciscan life. At its close he made the usual three vows of poverty, chastity and obedience. A few days later he was ordered to St. Anthony's Monastery in St. Louis, Mo. There he devoted four years to the study of theology and cognate branches. On June 27, 1903, he was ordained to the Roman Catholic priesthood by Archbishop Glennon, of St. Louis. Two days later he celebrated his first Mass in the Church of St. Francis Solanus at Quincy, Ill., in the presence of a large gathering of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish friends.

During his theological course Father Rooney showed signs of tuberculosis, so that after completing his course of studies at St. Louis he was transferred to the Franciscan Monastery at Phoenix, Ariz., in the hope that the dry air might benefit his lungs. For several months he was engaged in missionary work among the Pima Indians. His work among the Pimas, however, was far too active to allow much chance of recuperation. The Lady Poverty, whom he had so eagerly courted, embraced him at the very outset. At his first charge, the mission of San Juan Bautista, he strove to support a school for two hundred Indian children, in order to prevent their faith and morals, as is too frequently the case, from being ruined at the government schools in the neighborhood. Despite the utmost economy ($1.50 a month for each child in huts of mud and brush, which he strove to supplant by new houses of adobe), it was a hard struggle among a people doubly impoverished by drought, and he had a still harder task in trying to piece out with lumber the self-built adobe churches of the Pimas. "These poor people," he wrote in June, 1904, "appreciate everything that is done for them, and pray with great fervor for their benefactors. I am glad to give all my time and strength and to bear the burden and the heat of the day (now 110° in the shade) to make known to these good people Him who is the Way, the Truth and the Life."

Late in the summer of 1904 Father Rooney was attached as curate to St. Mary's Church in the city of Phoenix, with a parish of some six hundred American and Mexican families. On Sundays he preached alternately in English and Spanish, conducted the Spanish Sunday school and presided at the meetings of four American and Mexican religious societies. Besides the languages mentioned, Father Rooney was at home in the German, Pima Indian and Italian tongues. During the week he was occupied in making visits to the sick, giving instruction in the parochial school, and other work incidental to the daily life of a Catholic priest. He contributed occasional articles to the Messenger of the Holy Childhood, published by the Indian boys at Harbor Springs, Mich., and the Western Catholic Review of Prescott, Ariz. But the work proved too much for his strength, which he could not persuade himself to spare. In April, 1905, he had to be transferred to the Old Mission at Santa Barbara, Cal. "In this charming spot," he wrote in the same year for his class biography, "with the quiet Pacific rolling before and the wooded mountains of Santa Inez towering behind, I am to remain until able to resume active work." But his work was never resumed; although his extraordinary cheerfulness and alertness of mind never left him even up to the moment of his death. On the morning of May 24, 1906,—

Ascension Thursday,—a fatal hemorrhage occurred about half-past nine o'clock, just as the solemn high Mass was beginning in the Old Mission Church. At the moment that the deacon had sung the Gospel of the Ascension and extinguished the paschal candle, Father Rooney died, having carefully marked the portions of the Gospels which he wished to have read to him during his last hour. He was buried in the Franciscan cemetery at Santa Barbara. His short life, made long by its variety and intensity, had been consumed for his ideal of duty and God-given charity.

STEPHEN BROOKS ROSENTHAL

Born	New York, N. Y., Jan. 9, 1878.

School	University Grammar School, New York, N. Y.
Years in College	1894-1898.
Degrees	A.B., 1898; A.M., 1901; LL.B., 1901.
Married	Millicent Moses, New York, N. Y., Nov. 30, 1908.

Business	Lawyer.
Address	(home) 545 West 111th St., New York, N. Y. (business) 2 Rector St., New York, N. Y.

After graduating I spent the next three years at the Harvard Law School, then went back to New York, my home town, where I served a five years' apprenticeship and started out for myself. Now I am in partnership with Clayton J. Heermance, a Union College (1900) graduate, under the firm name of Rosenthal and Heermance. I have done nothing to make me famous or infamous. My firm represented F. Augustus Heinze during his various indictments and trial. For the past four years we have represented the Fur Merchants Credit Association of New York, which has brought me into the United States Bankruptcy Court. I have tried to be of some use in weeding out abuses in bankruptcy cases. It has meant sending some people to jail. I never continued the newspaper work, of which I did so much at college. I am writing this because I find some of the boys still have a notion that in some way I was fitting myself for a journalistic career. Just to avoid becoming a crusty old lawyer and at the same time to be of some use to the world, I have gone in for a bit of sociological effort. I have for several years been a director of the Young Men's Hebrew Association and also of the Emmanuel Brotherhood. The work of the former is on the lines of the Young Men's Christian Association; the latter maintains a settlement house on the East Side. In November, 1908, I married, and hung out a sign "Boy Wanted." The stork was blind, left us a little girl, and has never paid us another visit. It begins to look as if I shall never be able to visit Stephen Brooks, Jr., at Cambridge and tell him of the marvellous things done by the Class of 1898. Shortly after graduation I entered the employ of the banking and brokerage firm of Estabrook and Company of Boston, where I remained as clerk until December, 1899. Towards the end of December, 1899, I left Boston for the island of Cuba, where I have had my residence up to the present time. Until January, 1906, I lived near the town of Artemisa, where I was interested in the setting out and care of a citrus fruit grove. During the first eight months of 1906 I was occupied with a contract for constructing some ten miles of the Havana Central Railroad lines. In November, 1906, I formed a partnership with Mr. Benigno Diago of Havana, and in that city carried on a stock, bond, sugar and general brokerage business. In 1908 and 1909 we were also representatives in Cuba of Arbuckle Brothers of New York. In December, 1909, I dissolved partnership with Mr. Diago and bought a sugar mill and plantation, known as Central Armonía, near the town of Bolondrón. In the following year this concern was made a stock company, and since then I have been in charge of the operation and management of the sugar mill and plantation. In May, 1899, I enlisted in the First Corps Cadets, M. V. M., and served five years. The summer of 1900 was spent traveling abroad. The next year I went with E. H. Rollins and Sons, bankers, and was sent by them into New York and Pennsylvania, selling bonds. In May, 1904, I settled in Elmira, N. Y., in the bond business. The present firm, Sawyer, Noble and Company, was started in 1908. We have been especially interested in the hydro-electric developments of New England. Aside from my regular business, I was interested in a small way with Glenn H. Curtiss, whose factories are just north of us, in helping to consolidate his various manufacturing enterprises into the one company which now makes the famous flying boat. Elmira is easily reached by several rail and automobile roads, and 1898 men will receive a warm welcome. I wrote An Anglo-American Alliance, a children's story, published in St. Nicholas Magazine, November, 1901. the freight department of that road for five years, being situated in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. I then left the railroad business and went to Boston to represent two companies doing business in Philadelphia,—one a coal company and the other manufacturing rubber. It may be of interest to add that I live in Wellesley, Mass., and have a family of four children. Any other facts in connection with my life since graduation which the class would like to know I will be only too glad to answer personally, with possibly a few exceptions. I am beginning to show signs of baldness, and am inclined to side with the suffragettes. Member: Tennis and Racquet Club of Boston.

GUY HAMILTON SCULL

Born	Boston, Mass., Nov. 2, 1876.
Parents	Gideon, Anna J. H. (Seiler) Scull.
School	Hale's School, Boston, Mass.
Years in College	1894-1898.
Degrees	A.B., 1898.

Business	Journalism.
Address	(home) 131 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, Mass. (business) Harvard Club, New York, N. Y.

In the Second Report, published in 1908, Scull wrote: "Since leaving college I have followed the profession of journalism in various places." For this report he has written nothing. In view of the fact, however, that he is a pretty prominent member of the Class, your Secretary deems it expedient to try and record a few of the things Scull has done.

Before graduation he joined the Rough Riders and served with that organization until its disbandment. In 1900 he became a war correspondent in South Africa and made a brilliant reputation for himself. On returning from South Africa he did special reporting for the Boston Globe, the New York Commercial Advertiser and Collier's Weekly, making trips to Newfoundland, Venezuela, Bulgaria and St.

Petersburg. In 1904-1905 he went to Manchuria as a special war correspondent for the New York Commercial Advertiser. In 1908 Scull, together with three or four other Harvard men, fitted out the old Cup Defender, Mayflower, and started for the West Indies. The purpose of this expedition was to recover bullion from a Spanish treasure ship supposed to have been sunk in the sixteenth or seventeenth century on one of the coral reefs. Outside of Hatteras, however, the Mayflower ran into a hurricane, was dismasted and tossed about on the sea for two or three days, until finally a thrilling rescue was made of the crew by a tramp steamer. In 1909 Scull stuck to shore and became secretary to the first deputy commissioner of the New York police. He resigned at the same time that Commissioner Bingham left the service and went back to newspaper work. In 1910 Scull was placed in charge of the so-called Buffalo Jones expedition to South Africa. This expedition was fitted out with the idea of lassoing and taking moving pictures of all the wild animals of that country and was remarkably successful. In speaking of the expedition Colonel Roosevelt says: "Their feats in roping lion, rhino, giraffe and other animals were extraordinary performances. . . . No hunting trip more worthy of commemoration ever took place in Africa." In 1911 Scull was connected with the Department of Justice and saw service on the Mexican frontier, and later served as the head of the police department in Nicaragua. In 1912 he was connected with the publicity department of the Progressive party in the recent presidential campaign in New York State.

On leaving the Law School in 1901, I came to New York to get some legal experience, thinking that after a year or two I would return to the West. I entered the office of Carter and Ledyard at 54 Wall Street in September. During the year 1902 I travelled considerably, tutoring a young man who had got into some small trouble at a preparatory school. During this year I was partly responsible for one student (my charge), going later to Harvard. I returned to the same law office January 1, 1903, and learned how to try small cases. On May 1, 1905, I was appointed claims attorney for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company. Later I was promoted to be assistant attorney, and on October 1, 1908, was made attorney, which position I have since held. I have an extremely busy and varied business life. I am a confirmed commuter, living twenty-five miles out from New York. If anything goes wrong, by chance, on the railroad, the natives of Rye blame it on me. The principal sport in this village is golf, to which I devote some spare time whenever possible. Member: Apawamis Club of Rye, Harvard Club of New York, New York Bar Association.

Being granted a leave of absence for the senior year in college, I entered the Harvard Medical School and finished one year's study there. A very serious illness caused me to give up further study, and I spent several years in California and Colorado, travelling and regaining my health. The medical profession, in the opinion of my advisers being out of the question, I studied law, passed the bar examinations of Colorado in 1903, and practised law in Colorado Springs, later in Denver, entering into partnership with Hon. E. C. Stimson. In 1908 I returned to Boston to live and to practise law, becoming counsel for some corporations and a trustee of estates.

I served my apprenticeship in business with Charles Scribner's Sons, being with them a year and a half after leaving college. Afterwards I worked in other New York publishing offices. Returning to Boston, I took charge of my father's paper, the Brookline Chronicle, and have edited it the greater part of the time since 1901, and am at present its editor. I read law at home, not however with the purpose of becoming a practising attorney. A short adventure in musical journalism, as managing editor of Musical America in New York in 1905, did not lead to a permanent connection. In December, 1908, the business in which I am associated with my father purchased the Green Bag, the lawyer's magazine, and I have since edited it. What spare time I have is devoted mainly to study and literary work.

Articles which I have written have appeared in the Journal of Political Economy, the Annals of the American Academy, the Municipal Journal, the Green Bag, the Boston Transcript, the Monthly Musical Record (London), and other periodicals. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, American Academy of Political and Social Science.

In the fall of that year I entered the offices in the Devonshire Building, 16 State Street, Boston, of Arthur J. Selfridge, William Odlin, Charles F. Richardson and John W. In 1899 and 1900 I was appointed by my father as his private secretary, and served as such during one session of Congress. In the fall of the years 1901 and 1902 I attended the Harvard Law School as a special student and in 1902 and 1903 attended the Boston University law school, being admitted to practice in June, 1903. In January, 1904, I formed a partnership with Alexander H. Bullock, Harvard, 1896, under the firm name of Bullock and Thayer. In January of this year, owing to the death of my brother, Henry H. Thayer, my father formed a partnership with Mr. Bullock and myself, under the name of Thayer, Bullock and Thayer, and I am now practising law as a member of that firm, with offices in the State Mutual Building, Worcester, Mass. On January 30, 1905, I married Anstis Helen Goulding, daughter of Frank P. Goulding of Worcester, and have three daughters, all of whom fortunately have been well. My life since leaving college has been rather uneventful, as I have been practising law steadily, and have enjoyed it and find it more interesting the longer I practise. I have not made a specialty of any branch of law, but have prepared, tried and settled a great many cases for street railroads and insurance companies. No misfortune or unhappy incident has happened to me since my graduation from Harvard, until my older brother, Henry, died this last November, which was and is a great shock to me. I am a member of the board of park commissioners here in Worcester, and have enjoyed my duties thus far exceedingly. I have never held any public office save the above. The only office of honor and trust which I have held is that of father in and of a very fine young family, which is honor enough for me. I intend to be present at the Quindecennial next June and take part in some of the festivities, and trust to meet many of our classmates and enjoy a thoroughly good time, which is assured by the very competent committee that has been appointed to take matters in charge. I have not written any books, articles or plays, although I have read a great many books and have witnessed a great many plays, and I am of the opinion that the realms of literature and art would have missed but very little had most of them never been written, translated or staged. At the completion of a four years' course in the Harvard Medical School in 1902, I returned to my native city to put into practice, on the unsuspecting public, what had been taught me in my line of work in the school and hospitals. In this city I have stuck ever since, and expect to keep my headquarters here henceforth. Ten years' practice of medicine has passed quickly by, yet not much can be written that would be called truly Mexicanissimo. I have taken things easily (as a general rule) and but one thing (truly unsought for) was a really difficult proposition and hard to get rid of.

I refer to an attack of blood poisoning which I contracted in June, 1912, which set back my schedule six months, and at one time I thought very lightly of a quindeccennial reunion with my classmates in 1913. However, as I write this "autobiography" (so called), I have again recovered fully my appetite for food and drink, and hope to be present at the coming festivities of 1913. I have taken things easily, as I said before, such as an appointment as assistant surgeon on the Burbank Hospital staff in 1904; as surgeon on the same hospital staff in 1912, which appointment I have since given up; appointment as school physician in chief in 1907; and an appointment as surgeon to the Simonds Manufacturing Company in 1910. I wrote an article entitled Wound Diphtheria—Report of a Case, which was published in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal (August 31, 1911). Member: Fay Club, Alpine Golf Club, Fitchburg Society for Medical Improvement, Fitchburg Medical Club, Burbank Hospital Doctors Association, Massachusetts Medical Society, Worcester North District Medical Society.

Tirrell in Boston. Graduating from the Boston University law school in the summer of 1901, I took the Massachusetts bar examinations, and was duly admitted to the Massachusetts bar in September of that year. I then entered a partnership with Forrest N. Adams and the said Charles Q. Tirrell for the practice of law at 42 Court Street, Boston. I was graduated from Harvard College in the Class of 1898, and entered the Harvard Law School in the fall of that year. After attending the Law School for two years, I was absent during 1900-1901, but was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in spring of 1901. I rejoined the Law School in fall of 1901, and received degree of LL.B. the following spring, 1902. In September that year I entered the law office of Stetson and Stetson, New Bedford, Mass., where I remained until March, 1903. During the same period I practised law to a limited extent in my own town, Wareham, Mass. In March, 1903, I became interested in the politics of my home town (Wareham), and during that month was elected selectman for a term of three years and overseer of the poor and assessor for the term of one year. At the two following elections I was reëlected for the yearly offices of assessor and overseer of the poor. At the spring election of 1906 I was again elected selectman, the term of office having been changed to one year, and to the two other offices before mentioned. By a vote of the present board of selectmen I was made chairman of that body. Since taking up the town business I have resigned to a great extent the practice of law, but this I intend to be only temporary. (Second Report.)

Business	Professor of art.
Address	Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

In 1899 I received the degree of A.M. at Harvard. The next two years were spent in residence at Harvard in preparation for the degree of Ph.D. in Classical Archæology. 1901-1902 I spent in Greece as Charles Eliot Norton Fellow in classical archæology (I would give a good deal to know what Norton must have thought of this first horrible example foisted upon him). 1902-1903 I spent in residence at Harvard; that is, I put the nights in "in residence" (the reverse of the usual undergraduate practice), for during the day I passed my spare moments as assistant curator of classical antiquities in the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. The year 1903-1904 found me "farthest north" teaching Greek and German (Heaven save the mark!) in the University of Vermont. The next year saw me, because of virtue, transferred to Columbia University (a place run by N. M. Butler). At the close of this year my fame had so extended that Princeton felt that it could not get along without me, so I went thither to scatter rays of sunshine in that quarter. There, probably because of some oversight on the part of the authorities (who probably did not find out before that I was that rara avis, a Harvard man, a species not usually making its habitat in Princeton),—there, I reiterate, I remained until 1911. Thereupon my fame grew apace, and I was called to Vassar, where I now officiate as professor of art. I should have said that my function at Princeton was to teach art and archaeology under the guise of preceptor (an office, since my withdrawal, known as that of assistant professor). That is my academic record to date, unless you wish to include the fact that in wild moments I have rushed into print about subjects in art and archæology that in all probability never interested any one but myself.

I have led a quiet, uneventful life without especial romance or excitement, never having married or held public office. Four years I put in railroading with the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad. Six years were spent with the American Shipbuilding Company. The last three years have seen me in the business office of that worthy newspaper, the Kansas City Post, where I still remain. All of these concerns have made me put in some pretty hard work when I would rather, perhaps, have been admiring the scenery, but, except for this vexation, I have had a pretty good time in a quiet way as I went along, and I have enjoyed splendidly good health. Regards to all in 1898. I have written only newspaper stuff. Member: Kansas City Athletic Club, Kansas City Young Men's Christian Association.

Address	Atoyac, Vera Cruz, Mexico, Federal District.

Almost immediately after graduation I came to this country, reaching the capital, Mexico City, the latter part of July. After a few days I left Mexico City and arrived duly at Orizaba, in the state of Vera Cruz. Here I spent a couple of days and bought the supplies I was going to need on the coffee ranch I was coming to. From Orizaba I came to Atoyac. So far my travelling was entirely by rail. But now, to get to the ranch, I had to mount a mule. For climbing these mountains mules, small but strong, are used generally, for they stand it notably better than horses. I shall never forget that first trip up to the ranch. It was all up hill and, as it was the rainy season, the road was abominably muddy. In parts it was almost boggy, and the mud stuck nearly like glue. Also it was very warm, and the flies bothered me a great deal. On account of all this, it is not difficult to imagine that before I was half way up I was thoroughly discouraged and disgusted. Eventually, however, I got up to the ranch. For the first few weeks I found it hard to be in a joyful frame of mind, for I missed

Cambridge. Finally, however, I began to take an interest in my surroundings and to be generally optimistic. After learning a lot about coffee cultivation, I acquired, through the magnificent generosity of a friend in the States, a small ranch here. As the ranch was already developed, I had nothing to do but pick the coffee, cure and ship it to the States. In the picking season, November to March, I was busy enough. After that I hadn't much to do. I therefore went out frequently with hunting parties or practised photography. In the summer of 1902 I accepted the management of another and much larger ranch in this same vicinity. The following summer I was married to Señorita Aurelia Ramirez. We are now the parents of four children, all girls. Now I am quite accustomed to the country and the people. Consequently I am happy; and if it were not for revolutions and revolutionists I'd be happier. A band of these swooped upon me last January. They carried off all the money (about sixty pesos) I had in the house, my new Colt's Automatic 38-calibre pistol, puttee leggings, Gillette razor and a number of other articles I did not miss until after they left. They had my watch too, but, owing to my vigorous protest, the general, Don Higinio Aguilar, made them give it up. With these fellows out of the way I find life here very attractive. From June, 1901, until March, 1902, I was with a government forestry expedition in northern California and later knocking around San Francisco. Later I was appointed assistant superintendent at this plant, and in January, 1912, was appointed assistant factory manager. This

After leaving college I started in to learn the paper manufacturing business. Now, after being in it for fifteen years, I realize more and more each day that learning a manufacturing business is a life job. Changes of business conditions and the advances of science are showing me every day how little I know. On this philosophy I rely for some success in the future. As a result of my endeavors I have been able to make a living, buy a small section of God's Own Country, and have added some branches to my family tree. I am enjoying life in the peaceful community of East Walpole, Mass. I have written no books nor in any other ways have I had much trouble with the neighbors. I am doing some farming; have raised dogs, pigs, vegetables, ducks and other amphibious reptiles. There is money in all of these. The only trouble is to get it out. Space does not permit me to make out a list of the public offices to which I have failed to be elected.

On June 1, 1909, I resigned as secretary of the Reform Association and was nominated assistant secretary of the National Municipal League. After graduating from college I went through two years of the Harvard Law School course, but after passing the second year examinations I was taken seriously ill, and was unable to return and take my third year. While convalescing in Washington, D. C., I entered the auditing department of the Riggs Insurance Company, of that city, and later was its chief bookkeeper. Following this I served in the Bureau of American Republics, under Hon. W. W. Rockhill. As soon as my health allowed I returned to New York, passed the bar examinations in 1902, and became a clerk in the office of the law firm of Peckham, Starr and Miller. I continued with them until June, 1905, when I took an office with several other young lawyers. December 15, 1905, I was appointed by Colonel Roosevelt auditor general for Porto Rico, and a member of the executive council and senate of that island. The auditor's duties correspond to those of our state comptrollers. In 1907 I was sent to Santo Domingo with a view to putting in a similar system of auditing and accounting to that I had installed in Porto Rico. August 25, 1908, I was appointed by Mr. Taft secretary of state of Porto Rico. I was subsequently elected president of the senate of the island, and was chairman of its committee on finance and committee on appropriations. I was also a member of the legislative committee which negotiated Porto Rican bond issues for road building. I was appointed by the governor chairman of the franchise and public service commission, and became a member of the board of trustees of the University of Porto Rico. I was reëlected president of the upper house of the legislature, and on October 14, 1909, became acting governor of Porto Rico. In the spring of 1910 I had a second attack of fever. The doctors advised me to leave the tropics at once. I resigned, and returned to the States. After two months I was appointed by Mr. Taft one of the United States representatives to the fourth Pan-American conference, held at Buenos Aires in July and August of that year, and I proceeded to Argentina. The congress consisted of the representatives of the twenty-one republics, including the United States, and negotiated arbitration treaties, treaties for unifying the customs house dues and regulations, patents and trade-mark treaties, international sanitary agreements, etc. Most of the treaties have since been ratified by the authorities of the respective countries. I was later appointed a member of the United States Commission to Chile. On the return journey I spent some time in Peru and Ecuador preparing a report for our government. Before my return another dose of fever decided me to leave the federal service, and I am now permanently practising law in New York, at 32 Liberty Street, where I am never too busy to see members of the Class of 1898. After my return I was elected vice-president of the Madison Square Republican Club, and later became chairman of its board of governors. I still have an active interest in Latin American and Spanish affairs, through the Pan-American Society of the United States, of which I am vice-president; the Ibero-Americano Club and the Spanish Athenaeum, of which I am a director; the Spanish-American Athenaeum, and other similar societies. I have written an address which was delivered before the Lake Mohonk Conference in 1909 on The Agricultural Communities of Porto Rico and Central America and their Problems, published in the Proceedings of the Lake Mohonk Conference, various articles on South American Republics and general subject of Pan-American problems for the Political Science Monthly, etc. Member: American Academy of Political and Social Science, American Political Science Association, American Association for Labor Legislation, National Association of Comptrollers and Accounting Officers, Association of American Government Accountants; University, Union, Republican, Harvard, and Underwriters Clubs (New York City); and Chevy Chase (Washington, D. During the academic year following graduation with the Class of 1898, I essayed teaching English and history in a preparatory school in Detroit. That institution did not long survive, and I do not know whether my efforts hastened its peaceful end. In the fall of 1899 I returned to the university for a course in the Harvard Law School, following my original plan, where I spent two years of solid work under the inspiration of that splendid faculty of master minds then dominating the great school they founded. At the end of the second year, in June, 1901, I was obliged to leave to enter the office of Hon. Joseph R. Churchill and Robert T. Babson, where I finished preparing for the bar examinations. I was admitted to the Massachusetts bar on March 4, 1902, and have been in general practice in Boston ever since. Since 1909 I have been devoting much time to the special field of customs law, associated with the firm of Searle and Pillsbury, now Searle and Waterhouse; and have appeared for various New England importing interests before the Court of Customs Appeals and the Treasury Department at Washington, and the United States Board of General Appraisers at New York and Boston. I can point with some satisfaction to a few rents I have helped to tear in the schedules of the Payne tariff act, by pointing out to the learned justices some of its inequalities and ways to overcome them. In general practice I have been much interested in coöperative banking; and have acted as counsel during the past five years for the Melrose Coöperative Bank, a small but excellent institution of the kind. From contact with shareholders and officers in many banks, I am more and more impressed with the widespread influence for good which this principle of regular and systematic savings exerts in the community. I have had little time for politics. Too many busy men of my acquaintance have wrecked their professional practice and neglected their business for the doubtful benefits of petty public service. I have dabbled a little in city politics, however; and in my home city of only a few thousand voters, blessed with a very numerous body of aldermen, I have not escaped a short sentence in that honorable body. A citizen who is not an ex-alderman there is a marked man. A man has to serve a term or two to avoid being conspicuous; but I find one can live it down in time. The principal clubs that I find time to enjoy now are the Bellevue Golf Club, where I am vainly trying to keep down my weight with a little tennis, and the Amphion Club, a male chorus of much merit. I have always maintained an active interest in the alumni work of my college fraternity, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, both in its national policies and in development of the Harvard chapter. Member: Masonic bodies in Melrose: Wyoming Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Waverly Royal Arch Chapter, Hugh de Payens Commandery, K. T.

Graduating in June, 1898, I took a short vacation at my early country home, White Rock, Me.; and in August of the same year entered the Boston office of the Provident Life and Trust Company of Philadelphia, as special agent. Soliciting life and endowment policies was my work, and I think none of my friends in Boston, Cambridge and surrounding towns were overlooked in my canvass. I meant to work them all. While the work was fairly remunerative, for I think I received fully as much as my classmates during the year and a half I solicited insurance, neither future prospects nor keen love of work held me from making a change in June, 1900. In my preparatory school, the Maine Wesleyan Seminary at Kent's Hill, Me., I formed the acquaintance of one of the trustees, Horace H. Shaw, of Portland, then engaged in the manufacture of shoes, with factory at Springvale, Me. At the period of which I write Mr. Shaw was anxious to retire from active business, and as his son was that year graduating from Harvard and had already decided to make the shoe business his life-work, he made plans to reorganize his business, long and well known to the trade as the Shaw-Goding Shoe Company, with his son as president and general manager. Mr. H. H. Shaw wrote me, asking if I would be interested to go into the company as a small stockholder and devote my time to the selling end of the business. After a visit to the factory and the home of Mr. Shaw in Portland, I decided to leave the insurance business and go back to Maine. I spent a few weeks at the factory to familiarize myself with shoe construction and terms, and by September, 1900, I was on the road, with the State of Ohio as a territory, a full-fledged shoe drummer, as my friends liked to remind me. I spent two years as salesman, or until the dissolution of the Shaw-Goding

Company in 1902. From the spring of 1902 until the summer of 1908 I was on the road for the following shoe companies: Hosmer-Codding Shoe Company, Boston; Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, New Bedford, Mass.; and the M. A. Packard Company of Brockton, Mass. Two trips of about twelve weeks each were made for these companies each year, with a lay-off in midwinter and midsummer, respites which I ordinarily spent at the old country home in Maine. With these good companies I visited every state in the Union (excepting the Pacific coast) and old Mexico, where I had to learn Spanish to sell the goods. I found travelling not without its pleasures and attractions, in fact rather congenial to my make-up; and, as travelling expenses are found, at the end of ten years, I had saved several thousand dollars from an increasingly growing salary. In the summer of 1906 I made a pleasure trip to Europe of two months' duration, visiting the British Isles, France, the Netherlands, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Italy,—a trip thoroughly delightful and profitable in every way. In the summer of 1908 I gave up travelling, and made a business connection with the firm of Dunn and McCarthy, Auburn, N. Y., one of the largest manufacturers of women's shoes in the country, then operating four factories. I was first located at Binghamton, N. Y., where the company was starting a new factory for the manufacture of cheap McKays for the New York trade. I was given complete charge of the labor, although in the spring of 1909 I was given the superintendency of the factory, then making four thousand pairs a day. In June of the year following, however, I was transferred to the main offices of the company at Auburn, as assistant to the general sales manager, in which capacity I made various trips to the South, and showed the line in Boston during the buying season. In February, 1911, I left Dunn and McCarthy, and formed the Westcott, Whitman Company (of which I am president), specialist jobbers of women's shoes, at Syracuse, N. Y., and I am pleased to say the business is developing well. Fortune has not yet given me a wife, and so I am so much poorer than my more fortunate classmates; but I shall offer a cordial welcome to all '98's when they visit or come through Syracuse, at 217 1-2 West Water Street.

After the summer vacation following our graduation I entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, intending to take that course and then continue my father's medical work. In that winter, however, I found that the confinement of the course was too great and that I would be unable to carry through the work to completion, and therefore decided to give it up. Quite by accident I entered the office of Douglas Robinson and Company in the winter of 1898, and am still connected with the company, under the name, however, of Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, of which I am vice-president, doing a general real estate business in New York, especially in connection with the banks, trust and insurance companies and railroads. Although little time has been spared from work in connection with this company, I have been able to keep up my interest in some of the charitable institutions which I became associated with soon after leaving college, especially the Children's Aid Society as a trustee, the Five Points House of Industry as treasurer, the church extension committee of the New York Presbytery as trustee, and the State Charities Aid Association, of which I am a member. Unfortunately, I have had no time during these years for any extended vacations during which I could travel, but have spent such vacations as I was able to get in shooting and fishing. In 1904 I married Catharine Morgan Dix, a daughter of the Reverend Morgan Dix, and have two children. Member: University Club of New York, Harvard Club of New York, New York Athletic Club, Down Town Association, Narrows Island Club of North Carolina.

Ernest Devereux White

Born	Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 12, 1876.
Parents	John Stuart, Georgie (Read) White.
School	Berkeley School, New York, N. Y.
Years in College	1894-1895, 1901-1904.
Degrees	A.B., 1904.
Married	Harriet M. Steel, Philadelphia, Pa., June 6, 1906.
Died	Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 26, 1906.

Ernest Devereux White was born in Cleveland, Ohio, September 12, 1876. In 1880 his parents, John S. and Georgie A. (Read), moved to New York City, where his school training was in Berkeley School, of which his father was headmaster. He entered the Class of 1898 in Harvard College, but was obliged to relinquish his studies before the end of his freshman year, because of failure in health. From his fourteenth year, when he had a severe attack of rheumatic fever, his heart had been in abnormal valvular condition, and besides frequent suffering and permanent debarment from sports or great exertion, he always faced the danger of fatal collapse. He visited Nauheim, Germany, three times for the bath treatment, deriving much benefit in the way of alleviation. Between 1895 and 1901 he engaged in journalism as assistant editor of the Overland Monthly in San Francisco, trained himself in music (mandolin, piano and singing, in all of which he became proficient), and studied art, spending a winter in Paris at Julian's Studio, two seasons at the Art Students League, New York, and one as a pupil of William M. Chase. Although showing much promise in art, he decided not to make it his life work. He reëntered Harvard in 1901 to fit himself for teaching; beginning as a special student, he was admitted to the class of 1904 and graduated cum laude. After graduation he went to Paris again to acquire proficiency in conversational French, and in the fall of 1904 began teaching advanced French, history and English in the Phillips Brooks School, Philadelphia, Pa., of which his father was now headmaster. It was his cherished purpose to study for a Ph.D. degree in French. He was married June 6, 1906, to Harriet M. Steel, of Philadelphia, and went to Europe for a wedding trip. Returning early in September, he and his bride took up their residence with his parents at 4225 Pine Street. On September 21 his last illness began with severe headache, followed by high fever, and as the always weak heart was unable to force the blood through the lungs, septic pneumonia set in. He died after much suffering, September 26, 1906, two weeks after his thirtieth birthday and less than four months after his wedding. Ernest White was of an exceptionally gentle and pure spirit, reserved until he felt sympathy, but warmly devoted to those who won his affection. He had varied talents and gave promise of valuable accomplishment beyond what he had already achieved. His intense love of nature and his delight in art, his sensitiveness, courageous endurance of pain, and the almost sternly unyielding conscientiousness that underlay his wit and the charm of his personality, will be remembered as notable characteristics by those who knew him best. He was a member of the Fellowship Glee Club of Philadelphia.

Written for Second Report of Class of 1904.

Shortly after Commencement I went to Chicago to take up a post-graduate course at the Armour Institute (selected by my father), and was duly registered on the student payroll. Having learned to distinguish between a goat and a sheep from a post-mortem examination and the anatomy of various quadrupeds as relating to commercial nomenclature and form, I was assigned to a chair in the Italian and Slavic food department. In due course, finding the policy of the Institute was wholly commercial, with no fixed purpose of elevating the sons of Italy to our standards of dietetics, I resigned. Next, being led to believe that the consumption of oleomargarine was deleterious, I associated with a philanthropic institution which sought to promulgate the use of a non-deleterious ointment for the staff of life which could be produced at a cost within the reach of the poorer classes. When, however, Congress enacted a law subjecting this product to a tax and ruled that it should be labelled "Renovated" butter, the resources of the institution were gradually exhausted and it was forced to retire from the field. After doing the rolling stone stunt for a couple of years or so, I returned to Chicago, and was at last successful in finding a means of earning my livelihood and at the same time of being a factor in uplifting the moral standards of the business world. I have now been engaged in public accounting with Messrs. Price, Waterhouse and Company for seven years. Member: Harvard Club of Chicago.

I left college in April, 1898, to enter the Army, where I served during the Spanish War, first in Company H, Eighth Massachusetts Infantry, and later in the Third Division Hospital Corps, U. S. A. I received my discharge in 1899 on account of illness contracted during service, and entered the Harvard Medical School late in the term. In 1902, on account of recurring illness, resultant from army life under unfavorable conditions, I left the Medical School without finishing my course. From 1902 to 1909 I practised medicine (under Massachusetts registration), first serving an appointment as interne at the Waltham Hospital (1902-1903). In the fall of 1908, while driving (at night) to attend a patient in East Billerica, Mass., my carriage collided with an obstruction in the road and I was thrown out, receiving an injury which resulted in a traumatic neurosis and necessitated my giving up practice early in 1909. After a few months abroad I returned to Harvard and took my degree (M.D.) in 1911. Since then I have been living in California. Of late I have been employed by the department of engineering, state of California, at Lake Tahoe, Cal. (Emerald Bay Camp). The slate-gray annals of an unprogressive will be sufficient in my case. Immediately upon graduation I began teaching English in Valparaiso, and have been at it doggedly and continuously ever since. Such employment gives little chance for picturesque variety and limited opportunity even for autobiographic enthusiasm. A moving-picture representation—in fifteen reels—of my life since graduation could hardly be of much interest to the spectators; for one reel would be very nearly a duplicate of every other, and the theatre would be empty long before the last film was reached. A moderately conscientious effort immoderately prolonged to help those under my care to a more effective use of the mother tongue, and to a clearer and more sympathetic understanding of the literary work of some of the noble living and the noble dead, is about all I can claim for myself. Occasionally the rather pleasant monotony of teaching is broken by delivering an address before some body of teachers; and there are the recurring meetings of my clubs to give a little diversion. Such monochrome quietude doubtless has its compensations, but they are visible chiefly to the inner eye, and can hardly be ranked as achievements. I do not know whether I have done any credit to our reverend mother, but I have at least cherished a filial affection for her. Member: Saturday Evening Club, Mathesis Club, both of Valparaiso, Ind.

With only a general academic training at Harvard and with nothing particular in view for my life-work, I learned the rudiments of several different lines of occupation, one after another, without becoming very deeply engrossed in any one of them. My final selection became accordingly more a matter of accident than of predetermination. I bought a half interest in a small printing business, without knowing the first thing about that trade, or indeed much about real business in general, my reason being the absolute assurance of the seller that in five years I would be "on Easy Street." Naturally that didn't materialize, but my financial interest kept me in the game perforce, until finally, after some vicissitudes, I began to make clear headway. At present I am running a successful though small printing business in Westfield, Mass. Here I am living very happily with my family, with little care for other interests outside of my business and my home, and, I should add, my music, which consists of membership in local musical organizations and regular Sunday service in a church quartette. My two boys are promising and lively and give me all the further recreation I need.

After graduation I continued my studies in Europe and America in preparation for professional work in animal psychology. In 1902 I was appointed to an instructorship in comparative psychology in Harvard, and I now hold an assistant professorship in the same subject and institution. My work has been teaching comparative psychology and investigating in the physiology of the nervous system, animal behavior, and comparative psychology. The direction of research work in animal psychology as conducted by graduate students in the Harvard laboratory of psychology has been entrusted to me since 1902. Usually three or four research students are engaged in special work in this field. It has been my privilege to help to advance comparative psychology by taking part in the forming of the Journal of Animal Behavior, the Behavior Monographs, and the Animal Behavior series. These are the first regular publications in the world established for the materials of animal psychology. Both are succeeding admirably. During the past five years I have given considerable time to general educational problems and to eugenics. The latter subject I have presented to several classes of Harvard students, with encouraging results. It is my belief that instruction concerning heredity, sex hygiene and parental duties should be given in Harvard, and I am therefore attempting to develop a course in mental heredity and eugenics which shall be of value to Harvard men and to the race. As a director of the Massachusetts Society for Mental Hygiene I am trying to serve the commonwealth. Recently I have purchased a tract of land at Franklin, N. H., which I hope to use both as a summer home and as a reservation for studies in animal behavior. With the aid of advanced students I expect to carry on there, during the summer months, field and experimental studies of the instincts, habits and intelligence of animals. I should like especially to get into touch with those of my classmates who are interested in animal behavior and who have opportunities to observe animals, and also with those who are interested in the problems of eugenics or desire information concerning the subject. I have written some forty articles on Animal Psychology and the following books: The Dancing Mouse (The Macmillan Company, New York, 1907); Introduction to Psychology (Henry Holt and Company, 1911); Methods of Studying Vision in Animals (with J. B. Watson) (Behavior Monographs, 1911). Member: American Association for Advancement of Science, American Naturalists, American Physiological Society, American Psychological Association, Society for Experimental Biology and Medicine, Illuminating Engineering Society.

JUAN FELIX BRANDES

Born	Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic, South America, Dec. 22, 1875.
Parents	Ernesto, Emilie (Mirths) Brandes.
School	Paris and Berlin.
Years in College	1894-1896.
Married
Business	Mining engineer.
Address	(business) P. O. Box 1245, Station K, San Francisco, Cal. (permanent) Grosvenor Club, Piccadilly, W., London, England.

I attended the regular courses at the Scientific School until the summer of 1896 and also spent the whole summer of 1895 in Cambridge. Besides the regular scientific courses I took a number of other courses in subjects that interested me particularly, for which, however, I did not sign nor obtain any credit. I regret that being a foreigner I did not come in sufficiently close contact with any member of the faculty to advise me in accomplishing my purpose, because I might very easily have secured my A.B. degree on account of my fluency in foreign languages and familiarity with French and German literature as well as Latin; but then I was seeking that which was new to me, not that which was old and familiar. Family affairs compelled my return to Europe in the summer of 1896, but in the fall of that year I came to San Francisco and started my active career. By that time I considered myself sufficiently prepared for American citizenship and applied for same, receiving my final papers five years later, thereby accomplishing the original object that brought me to this country. Since those days I have pursued many other scientific studies, both here and in Europe, and my activities have brought me in close touch with mining. I worked around the mines and also in chemical laboratories for some time and then took up mining as a profession. In that capacity I have been connected with several large mining enterprises as engineer and managing director, and I examined many properties in Canada, all through this western country, Mexico, the West Indies and Europe, where I maintained an office for a number of years. I also spent much time in Mexico until the revolution forced me to abandon that field.

A number of years ago I married a young native daughter of the West, and since then I make California my home when in this country. For a number of years I made my headquarters in Denver, where I joined the Denver Country Club and Denver Athletic Club. I am still a member of the Rocky Mountain Harvard Club, also charter member of the Mile High Club. In London I belong to the Grosvenor Club. I am also a life member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers and a life member of the American Mining Congress. As to my future plans, I expect to return to London before long to again open my offices there and confine myself to the development of properties in South America.

After leaving Harvard I studied law one year, 1896-1897, in the law offices of Buck and Brown at Syracuse, N. Y. In 1897 I entered the law department of Yale University, being admitted to the middle class, and was graduated with the degree of LL.B. in 1899. In the following October I took up the active practice of law at Galveston, Texas, and so continued for ten years. In June, 1909, upon the unanimous recommendation of the bar, I was appointed by the governor of the state to the office of judge of the tenth judicial district of Texas. Previous to my elevation to the bench, I had been appointed assistant county attorney of Galveston County in 1903, and in 1906 was elected a member of the house of representatives of Texas from Galveston County, serving throughout the general and special sessions of the Thirtieth Legislature in 1907. In 1911 I was selected as orator, and delivered the oration at the reunion of college men held in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., during the summer of that year, under the auspices of the National Association of College Men. Subsequently I was elected a member of the board of governors of the association. From 1902 to 1910 I served as state secretary of the Texas Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and as second vice-president of the society from 1910 to 1911. I was also state delegate from this organization to the congress of the national society in Washington, D. C., in 1902. During my attendance at Yale I was elected president of the Texas Club and vice-president of the Southern Club; also president of the Wayland (debating) Club and member of the administrative board of the University debating societies from the Wayland Club; also literary editor of the Yale Shingle (the Law School annual), and was a member of Corbey Court (Waite Chapter, Phi Delta Phi) in the law department. In April, 1898, I left Harvard and enlisted as a private in the Eighth Massachusetts Volunteer Regiment, going with the regiment to Chickamauga Park and Lexington, Ky., receiving at the latter place in September of the same year an honorable discharge. Returning to Boston, I entered the employ of the Massachusetts highway commission as resident engineer in charge of the construction of state highways, and was stationed in several towns in the southeastern part of the state. In January, 1900, I went to Porto Rico as assistant engineer in the construction of highways on that island that were being built by the United States government. In September of the same year I left Porto Rico and returned to Boston, again going with the Massachusetts highway commission and remaining with them, except for a few months, until February, 1903. I remained with the Big Four until November, 1904, when I returned to Boston. In March, 1905, I went to Memphis as assistant engineer for the Memphis Street Railway, remaining there until the following November. I left college at the end of my required summer work in July (I believe), 1897, and went to Seattle, and from there to Alaska. I spent two and one-half years in Alaska, returning in December, 1899; entered the university to finish out my course in mining engineering and get my degree; but there were two half courses in electricity—one the first half year and one the second half year in the senior year, and composed principally of laboratory work, which it was impossible to make up. I could not take the second half without the first half. There was also one half course in geology that I was unable to take. I could not afford to take a whole year for one and a half courses. After finishing this year, June, 1900, I went into the National Bank of Redemption and was there two years. I then went to the Boston and Albany Railroad, engineer department, for one year. After leaving the Boston and Albany Railroad I went to California; took charge of the Ophir Mining Companies property as general manager, superintending operations for two years. I came to Seattle after leaving the mining company and worked under Captain A. O. Powell, making up assessment districts for the Lake Washington Canal. I was there one year, and then took charge of the field operations under Major H. M. Chittenden, United States engineer department for the improvement of Tacoma Harbor, by the construction of the Puyallup Waterway. I was with the engineer department one and a half years. I entered practice at Denver, Col., and continued for two and a half years. At the request of former friends, I returned to Detroit, where I had resided before entering Harvard, and have practised law continuously to date. Visiting Concord I became interested in Thoreau and his writings. As a result I became more or less of a naturalist. I was secretary of the Michigan Audubon Society for seven years and president during the past three. I am also president of the Detroit Institute of Science and a member and contributor of the Michigan Academy of Science. I am also a member of the American Ornithologists Union. While at Cambridge I was invited to work with the Students Volunteer Association, and accepted assignments for Boston. This work aroused my sympathies for humane effort. Since that time I have been on various boards of children's protective societies, and was secretary of the Michigan State Humane Association for years. At present I am a director and chairman of the legislative committee of that society; also a director of the Detroit Humane Society; a member of the National Economic League and American Forestry Association, and a correspondent for the United States Biological survey. I left Harvard to study painting in New York, and entered the Ecole des Beaux Arts in the autumn of 1898, returning to America in the autumn of 1901. I taught in the architectural department of Columbia University for the terms of 1902-1903. In 1904 the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, appointed me curator of the department of Oriental art. I had the honor of remaining in this post until I retired in the autumn of 1906 to take the Lazarus scholarship at the American Academy in Rome, where I spent the following two years, and a third in Paris, for further study in painting, and the history of the fine arts. Toward the end of 1909 I returned to New York, where I have continued since to paint and lecture.

I left Harvard in November of my junior year, and entered the class of 1898 at Columbia, where I remained only a few months. From June, 1897, until April, 1898, I had a position with the brewing firm of Howard and Childs. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War in May, 1898, I enlisted in Troop A, New York Cavalry, which was composed of volunteers from Squadron A. National Guard, of New York, of which I had been a member for about a year. During the war we were stationed at Camp Black, L. I., Camp Alger, Va., and at Newport News, Va., where we embarked in a transport for Porto Rico. Peace was declared shortly after our arrival, and although the troop saw active service, we were not actually under fire. We were mustered out in November, 1898, and I returned to my position with Howard and Childs. In November, 1900, I went with the stock brokerage firm of G. M. Carnochan and Company. After two years I obtained a position with Lester, Kneeland and Company of Chicago, who had opened a New York house, and remained with them until they closed in May, 1903, when I went with Charles A. Morse and Company. I filled various positions with this firm, from clerk to manager, until January 1, 1911, when I was admitted to the firm and represented them on the New York Stock Exchange. January 1, 1912, the firm of Clark, Childs and Company was formed to take over the business of Charles A. Morse and Company, and of this firm I am at present a member. I am still in the National Guard, and am at present captain and quartermaster of the First New York Cavalry, of which Squadron A is a part. I am much interested in yachting, and have owned three boats since I left Harvard. Joan was a catboat, twenty-five feet overall; Joan II, a thirty-five-foot auxiliary yawl; and Joan III, a new acquisition this year, a fifty-five-foot overall yawl. I have spent my vacations on my boat, and have cruised from Montreal to Norfolk, Va. Member: Larchmont Yacht Club, Harvard Club of New York, Racquet and Tennis Club, Squadron A Club.

After leaving college in 1896 I was associated with my father in business until his death in March, 1899, after which I spent some time in Arizona and Montana. I performed some special work in mining at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology during the summer of 1902, moving to Montana that fall, where I maintained a residence until 1909. I spent some time in Goldfield and Tonopah, Nev., during the first mining excitement there. I was also one of the pioneers in the mining camp of Greenwater, Cal., located on the edge of Death Valley. During all this time I was engaged in raising cattle on my ranch in Montana. While on a pleasure trip back East in January, 1909, I was buncoed into buying a seat on the Boston Stock Exchange, and have been sitting ever since until my trousers are threadbare. In January, 1911, I formed the stock exchange firm of Clark, Griffith and McWain, with offices at 10 Post Office Square. As a whole I have had what might be called a rather diversified life, with the usual bright and dark places in it. In finis, I wish to say there is only one place to live, and that is the Far West. Why, I can hardly explain, excepting that it is different, its people and its life.

I left college after one year (1897), and in the autumn of that year was given by my father the editorial management of Collier's Weekly. On the breaking out of the Spanish War the paper became popular on account of its war correspondence and photographs. From that time until the present I have been in active control of the business and editorial management of Collier's, and since my father's death in 1909, of the book publishing business of P. F. Collier and Son (publishers of the Harvard Classics). The most important achievements of the paper during this period have been the fight against patent medicines, which was largely responsible for the present Food and Drug Act, the exposure of Town Topics and the light thrown upon the official conduct of Secretary Ballinger. Outside of my work with Collier's, the formation of the Lincoln Farm Association for the purchase of the Lincoln birthplace farm, and an unsuccessful effort to establish on a permanent basis the Children's Educational Theatre have occupied my time. I have also been greatly interested in the aeronautical movement in America, was twice elected president of the Aero Club of America, and have had a fair amount of practical experience in flying. I am an Independent in politics, a Roman Catholic in religion, and my connection with Harvard was too ephemeral for me to believe that the college exercised much influence upon me or I any upon the college. Member: Racquet and Tennis Club, City Club, Country Club of Westchester, Catholic Club of New York City, Century Association, Automobile Club of America, Brook Club, Aero Club of America, New York Yacht Club, Players Club, Riding Club, Rumson Country Club, Rockaway Hunt Club, Turf and Field Club, Meadow Brook Club, Press Club, Harvard Club, American Museum of Natural History, National Conservation Society, Metropolitan Museum of Fine Arts, American Association for Advancement of Science, American Geographical Society, American Historical Society, New York Academy of Science.

After leaving college, for geographical and financial reasons, I came to Chicago to study law, and partly for the last-named reason have never been able since to get away. The three years spent in a law school were pleasant years, and years of more or less mental and moral development, probably more pleasant than they would have been had the development along the lines mentioned been more marked. After absorbing a sufficient amount of legal knowledge to secure favorable action on my petition for the degree of Bachelor of Laws, and after demonstrating to the Illinois State Board of Law Examiners that the school in which I had studied was remarkable for the individuals it could teach as well as for the theories it taught, I started out to acquire a position in a law office that would enable me to live in a room containing a window and to buy three full meals daily. After some search I found one that nearly paid my car fare.

Gradually promotion came and ambition grew. After one year's experience as clerk an opportunity was offered to serve the school in which I had pursued my law studies in the capacity of assistant to the secretary; the position permitted an attempt to acquire a clientage of my own and was accepted. This resulted ultimately in an appointment on the faculty of the school as secretary and librarian, which position I still occupy and which now requires the substantial part of the time of the incumbent. In August, 1902, I became wholly the property of an excellent young woman, and since New Year's day, 1905, I have been giving most of my labor aside from daily office work in training a boy how not to be what his father is. To sum up, since leaving college my life has been the ordinary life of the ordinary man in the city, some successes, many failures; a few pleasures, many sorrows; but fully worth the while. (Second Report.)

Am secretary and librarian at the Northwestern University Law School. At present I am associate editor of the Illinois Law Review and managing editor of the Journal of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology. Member: University Club of Chicago, Order of the Caif, Masons, Equity Lodge of Chicago.

After leaving college I went into the coal business in the office of my stepfather, later being transferred to the mines in Ohio, where I remained for two years, when my health gave out. I then had to give up business, and spent four years in the West on a ranch and in the Adirondacks. After regaining my health I went back to the coal business, and was sent to Ellsworth, Pa., where I remained for two years. I then moved east, and located at Short Hills, and for a year did nothing, eventually getting into the automobile business. I had the agency for the Pope Manufacturing Company's product in New York, but disposed of my interest last year, since which time I have been doing nothing.

I am still living for the future. When I shall have become old and decrepit, and no longer in the running, I will give you a detailed account of my life, if I find that it is worth while.

He was by profession an architect. His love for his profession and his devotion to it were intense. It was a very great trial to him when, after two years of active work as an architect, he was by circumstances led from that work into commerce. He became a member of the J. V. Clement Wholesale Millinery Company, a stock company, of which he was the vice-president. But his love for architecture never lessened, and he looked forward in the hope of returning to the practice of that profession. On August 2, 1903, he was sailing in his yacht near his summer home at Catawba Island, a few miles from Toledo. The capsizing of the yacht caused his death. He was an athlete and an expert swimmer, in fact was considered one of the best sailors and swimmers on Lake Erie, but had at times experienced symptoms of heart trouble caused by an injury while playing football, so it is a question whether he was drowned or perished of heart failure while in the water.

At the end of my junior year I was sent to London by Messrs. Harper and Brothers, publishers, as an assistant to Mr. C. W. McIlvain, who was in charge of their London office. After a little over two years and a half, though, when the firm was in difficulties, I returned home, and for about three years was secretary and treasurer of the Outing Publishing Company. From then until November, 1909, I was in the stock brokerage business. At that time an accident put me out of business, but in December, 1911, being advised by my doctors against a city life, I moved to Millbrook, N. Y., to take up farming. Another serious operation, however, interrupted my work, but in October, 1912, I got together ten young horses to develop and sell as hunters, and the outlook is most promising, although I am again temporarily in the hospital. I have my horses and am living at a friend's farm in Millbrook, which I am looking after for him. Will be as well as ever in a few months. On my return from London, while living at Lawrence, Long Island, I was treasurer of the village for over five years. Also I have represented New York State on the hunts committee of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association from its formation up to this spring. Member: Racquet and Tennis Club, Harvard Club, both of New York.

In 1903 I moved to Binghamton, and became treasurer and manager of the Sportsmen's Supply Company, manufacturing sporting goods. In 1913 the name of the company was changed to the Lewis M. Weed Company, Incorporated, but otherwise no changes have occurred in the business or my occupation. I am just a plain old bachelor, and have no proud record to report, other than paying my bills and generally conducting myself somewhat better than I seemed able to do in college. Address	Hanging Rock Iron Company, Hanging Rock, Ohio. (?)

I graduated from the Cincinnati Law School in 1899, and was compelled to wait five months before being admitted to practice, until I should be of age. Fortunately I managed to get enough business together, even before the close of school, in the way of collecting rents and sundry other small matters, to make a comfortable amount. The law, as a source of money making, however, did not appeal to me greatly, and after two years of it I went into railroad work. Soon afterwards I married a sister of the "bunkie" with whom I had shared blankets during the Spanish War, as privates. Poor health, brought on by office confinement, made me seek outdoor work, and I was for some years engaged in the various forms of newspaper work. I am at present with Rogers, Brown and Company, pig-iron and coke agents. (Second Report.)

Business	Real estate; orange grower.
Address	Hermet, Cal.

(1898-1901) Soon after leaving Harvard I worked in a typewriter factory in Roxbury, Mass., for two years, the idea being to learn the practical end of the business. In 1901 the typewriter company failed, so I had to change my plans. (1901-1902) I raised early tomatoes in Cutler, Fla. This was fairly successful, but the risks from frosts and early rains seemed too great to follow it up as a business.

(1902-1905) I bought a seashore farm at Mattapoisett, Mass., and just lived there for three years. (1905-1913) I came to Hermet, Cal., and have lived here ever since. My main interest here has been orange growing. Five years ago I planted thirty-five acres to oranges in a location that had always proved entirely free from frost. The grove developed into the show place of this valley—nothing better in southern California—until the recent freeze came. Now the grove is nearly ruined. For the last three years I have served as superintendent of streets of the city of Hermet,—thanks to Engineering 4 E—and am also in the real estate business. Member: Harvard Club of Los Angeles, Masons, Knights of Pythias, Eagle.

At the present time I am New England agent for the Wacark Wire Company of New York. On June 23, 1898, I was married to Miss Alice Rowland Stanton of Brooklyn at Kennebunkport, Maine (and therefore could not attend the Decennial celebration)! SAMUEL SOUTHEY HINDS

Born	Brooklyn, N. Y., April 4, 1875.
Parents	Joseph Edwin, Mary Ann (Beetham) Hinds.
School	Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.
Years in College	1894-1895.

Business	Lawyer.
Address	(home) 695 Prospect Sq., Pasadena, Cal. (business) Chamber of Commerce Building, Pasadena, Cal.

After leaving Harvard I entered the New York University Law School, and graduated, after a two years' course, with the degree of LL.B. I was associated with the law firm of Hoadley, Lauterbach and Johnson of New York City during my course in the Law School. Later I was assistant manager of the New York Consolidated Card Company for several years. I left New York about 1901, and after about two years in Denver, Col., came to southern California and located in Pasadena, the finest little town in the world. I have been here ever since, and hope it will be my good fortune to remain for many years to come. I am the official "village cut-up" here, and am a perfect marvel at landing jobs that no one else wants and to which no remuneration attaches. I have been on the board of directors and secretary of the Annandale Country Club for the past five years and director and treasurer of the Overland Club for the past three years. On several occasions I have almost been a candidate for public office of various degrees of importance. My chief claim to distinction is that at the last presidential election my vote swung the great state of California for Theodore Roosevelt, a well-known Harvard man. I have recently opened offices for the general practice of the law at Suite 300, Chamber of Commerce Building, Pasadena, and hope that any 1898 men who happen to be in this section will drop into the office and look out. Sam Fuller and Harry Whitfield, both 1898, have threatened to come out this way as soon as they can afford it. Member: Annandale Country Club, Overland Club, Cauldron Club, all of Pasadena, Cal.

Recovering from rheumatic fever in the spring of 1896, I left Harvard and went to Fort Scott, Kan., to regain my health. I returned to Hudson in the spring of 1897. The years 1897 and 1898 were spent in Hudson. In January, 1899, I entered the employ of the Apley Rubber Company of Hudson, and am still with them. I have seen the plant grow from a few pair to a capacity of thirteen thousand pair per day. I would be pleased at any time to show any member of 1898 how an independent company turns out the best line of rubber footwear in the country.

I spent considerable time after leaving college in finding out how many things I could do. Finally, early in the year 1900, I was attracted to the poultry business, and started in alone on my father's summer place in Truro, Mass., 'way down on Cape Cod. With no experience whatever with poultry and not much with housework, I found in a short time a good many problems on my hands, both in cooking my own meals and in providing for the numerous feathered stock which soon swarmed around me. Soon I married Miss Grace Haskell, a teacher in the Beverly schools, and we lost no time in getting our poultry plans under way. Her early life had been spent on a farm, and her experience proved of great help to me. The place was a twelve-acre one, with house and barn. We put up henhouses, bought hens and sittings of Barred Plymouth Rocks and White Wyandottes from well-known breeders, and soon had two or three hundred of our feathered friends about us. In July, 1902, we moved to Holden, where I was to manage a poultry farm. While there, nearly three years, four buildings were put up: a large barn, hog-house and two hen-houses, one two hundred and fifty feet long. Uncleared land was bought and cleared, and lots of time and money were spent. We kept one hundred and fifty pigs and nearly two thousand hens, the chief care of the poultry falling to me. But the farm changed hands at last, and we moved to another place in Holden. We are not now making a specialty of poultry, but have not lost our interest in them. Farm work still engages all my time and attention, and we thoroughly enjoy the same. Five children have been born to us, all sturdy and strong, fast growing up to be a help to us. I have not identified myself with any political work, and have found most of my social pleasures near home. Three or four years ago I joined a Men's Club formed in the church which I attend. I have attended also, occasionally, meetings of the Grange and The Farmers Club, held in my home town.

After leaving college I went back to a position I had filled before—principal of the Union Free School at Locust Valley, N. Y. After remaining there a year I was attacked by the mercantile mania and resigned my position to go into business. After sweltering in the city during July and August (previously, I had spent my summers lolling in a hammock or boating), the company I was with actually had the hardihood to go to the wall, so yours truly was out of a job. I secured the principalship of the Union Free School in Harrison, N. Y., where I remained for three years, and was then kicked out because I neglected to invite the members of the school board to my wedding. Then I drifted to New York and entered the school system in the borough of Brooklyn, where I have since been slowly crawling upward. (Second Report.)

I have taught in the public schools of New York State and New York City ever since leaving Harvard. Since leaving college I have travelled abroad most of the time, and intend to continue it until I have seen almost every place of any interest. (Second Report.)

Since the last class report I have been most interested in raising alfalfa. The agricultural experts think that Virginia is one of the ideal spots to grow this weed, and naturally all the real estate men and people that have farms to sell agree with them; so we decided we would try it out down there, and secured a farm thirty miles north of Richmond on the main railroad line to Washington. By the time of the next class report I surely can tell you if Virginia is such a wonderful place to grow alfalfa as they say it is. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of New York.

As you may know, I left college in 1898. First the fire insurance business lured me into its lap, as a general and local agent in this city. In December, 1899, I forswore this for the mining and pig-iron business. I pursued the fickle goddess of fame and fortune, as manager and vice-president of the Georgia Iron and Coal Company until October, 1906, when the company sold its properties and left me out of a job. I then entered the machinery sales business, and continued in it until December, 1907, when the Georgia Steel Company, which had purchased the above-mentioned mining properties, failed. I then took charge of these properties again as receiver and turned them back to the reorganization committee in July, 1908. From that time until October, 1908, I was occupied in various and sundry ways, mostly sundry. In October, 1908, I undertook the organization of the Pratt Engineering and Machine Company, which was completed in January, 1909, and as treasurer of which I have held forth ever since, though not happily at all times. So much for my business experience. As to my personal career, I will charitably draw the veil over sundry affairs and experiences which occurred prior to my marriage on November 2, 1899, at which time I added a wife to my family, and since then two boys and a girl to the score. After leaving Harvard on account of illness I had a slow recovery, during which a year and a half abroad gave me pleasure and profit, in studying ruins and other matters of interest (both dead and alive) in Sicily, Italy, Greece, Egypt, Palestine and Europe. I worked in various architectural offices and studied at Tech. On leaving Tech. R. Clipston Sturgis sent me to Tuxedo to superintend some architectural and landscape work there, and then I went to Detroit for two years, draughting in offices there. Since then I made a false start in business with a partner in Boston. Learning that Olmsted Brothers, landscape architects, wanted an architectural draughtsman, I applied for the position, and have been employed with them ever since (four years ago in May). Last year I went to Panama for a vacation. Two years I have been to Bermuda. One winter I went to Florida.

Working toward the line for which I prepared at Harvard, viz. teaching physical training, I entered the field of professional athletics immediately after leaving college. During the season of 1898-1899 I held the position of physical director of the St. Paul Athletic Club of St. Paul, Minn. From 1899 to 1903 I was connected with various private schools of physical training, including those of August De-Well in Cambridge, Mass., and Anthony Barker of New York. During this period I played a number of vaudeville engagements in the smaller theatres. In December, 1903, I won a thousand-dollar cash prize offered for "the most perfectly developed man in the world," at the Physical Culture Exposition in Madison Square Garden, New York. From 1903 to 1907 I devoted my entire time to vaudeville engagements, appearing in every first-class vaudeville theatre in the United States, including the Keith theatres. My stunt consisted of posturing and feats of strength, and I was billed under the stage name of Al Treloar. In 1907 I took the position of physical director of the Los Angeles Athletic Club of Los Angeles, Cal., which position I have held continuously since. Books and articles which I have written: Treloar's Science of Muscular Development (210 pages, illustrated, Physical Culture Publishing Company, New York), Some points on Amateur Wrestling; and many other magazine articles and news stories, published for the most part in magazines devoted to physical training and in local daily papers. Member: B. P. O. Elks of Manistee, Mich., Lodge No. 250.

After leaving college in the spring of 1896 I immediately entered into my father's business, the manufacture of linseed oil. I began by making myself intimately acquainted with all the details of manufacture, putting on overalls and doing the actual work at the machines. My next step was promotion to the job of shipper, and in leisure moments I filled oil barrels and weighed them. I next took up a little of the general correspondence, and after I began to feel a little more at home with the ramifications of the business began to think for myself along original lines. From the time I left college, though having sadly neglected my chemistry while there, I had a great desire to see what could be done to improve the product for the consumer by means of chemical treatment. As in many other industries, practically no specializing had been done in our line, though when I started my father had already discovered a valuable process for artificially ageing oils, and we had been bleaching and neutralizing for some years by the regulation textbook methods. It was my ambition to develop and improve this end of the industry so that there might be specially treated oils for all purposes where at that time only the crude oil was used. I hoped that in time our house (Spencer Kellogg and Sons) might be considered expert advisors in everything pertaining to linseed oil. Of this scientific attitude to this particular industry I believe we can claim to be the originators. I have worked at this for fifteen years, and so have had no time to fill "offices of honor or trust," except my job. I can add little more to this blatantly egotistical history except to say that results have already most generously proven that at least in our business scientific study and specialization "hit the nail on the head." Commercially speaking, I believe I have lost very little by not finishing my four years at Cambridge; in many other ways, which have nothing to do with stocks or automobiles, I regret it very much. The most interesting work which I have done outside my business was with twelve to sixteen year old boys in social settlement work, covering a period of about two years. My avocation has always been photography, purely in the artistic sense; and, in connection with it, the study of painting in oils (canvases, not barns). The mention of three or four extremely interesting and instructive trips abroad would complete the data asked for by our worthy Secretary, whom I thank for giving me the opportunity to use so much valuable advertising space. I entered Beloit College in December, 1895, and was graduated in 1898. I became general secretary of the Student Young Men's Christian Association of Purdue University at Lafayette, Ind., in the fall of 1898, remaining in that position for two years, then served the student department of the international committee in student conference work on the Pacific coast in the summer of 1900. From 1900 to 1901 I served as travelling secretary of the student volunteer movement for foreign missions; did further student conference work in the Middle West in the summer of 1901, and entered Hartford Theological Seminary that fall. During that fall I devoted two weeks to travelling deputation work in the interests of the Toronto convention of the student volunteer movement. The fall of 1902 was spent with Luther Halsey Gulick of New York City in some special studies. The spring of 1903 was spent at Hartford and the winter of 1903-1904 in Colorado and New Mexico, most of the time on the Navajo Reservation picking up old Aztec for Beloit College and studying the Indian life. In the spring of 1904 I again travelled for the student department of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association among the colleges of the Pacific coast. During the summer I took charge of special association work at the military manœuvres for the north-western states held at Camp Steillacoom, near Tacoma, Wash. In the fall of 1904 I became religious work director of the Seattle Young Men's Christian Association, and received splendid support from a number of Harvard men like Oliver Cutts. In the fall of 1905 I again entered the service of the international committee, this time as a foreign secretary. The summer of 1906 was spent in travel up the Yangtse River as far as the Yale University Mission at Changsha, where Seabury, an old Hartford Seminary mate, did the honors. Out of this trip grew the first student conference for central China. The following winter was spent in study of the Mandarin at Nanking, in some teaching and in further travel in the interests of the first national convention of the Chinese Young Men's Christian Association,—held in Shanghai in May, 1907. Stubborn ill health forced a return to America that summer. I made the trip via Chefoo, Tsingtau, Tientsin, Peking, Manchuria and the Siberian Railway, with considerable profit and interest. During the next few years I became familiar with many routes to health in various parts of the country. In January, 1912, I visited the orchard development of a relative and friend at Irvington, Ala., and made an investment. I regard the future here as superior in promise to that of most of the localities exploited in the United States in the last two decades. In addition to scientific orcharding and the cultivation of the pecan, the Satsuma orange and the Japanese persimmon, I find much use for my time in the promotion of the natural manufacturing possibilities and the installation of such necessities as the telephone, good roads, etc. There are many university men in the region and there is room for more..

Business Address	Physician. (home) 75 Washington St., Winchester, Mass. (business) 101 Newbury St., Boston, Mass.

My father and mother, both from the state of Maine, settled in Halifax, Nova Scotia. My father, of the firm of W. L. Lowell and Company, bankers and brokers, was the American banker there for twenty-six years. There I was born in 1875. At eleven years of age we moved to Massachusetts, and in 1894 I entered Harvard Lawrence Scientific School. Much to dear old Professor Shaler's regret, I decided to cut my course short and enter the Harvard Medical School. In the fall of 1898 I was doing out-patient surgery in the Massachusetts General Hospital, and contracted typhoid fever, which kept me in the house nine weeks. I was advised not to return to the Medical School, and was sent abroad to recuperate. I spent some months in Hannover, Germany, riding horseback and studying German. From there I went to Berlin and did much the same. In 1901, now my last year in Medical School, I obtained the appointment as house officer at the Boston City Hospital. I was unable to be present at all my courses in the Medical School, and for this reason missed my degree by flunking in two courses. These I made up and received my degree in 1902. After finishing at the City Hospital I obtained the appointment of house officer at the Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary, serving there nineteen months. I opened an office at 101 Newbury Street, in March, 1904, and began private practice. I was married in December of the same year to a Toronto University woman, whose sympathetic help has been a constant encouragement in my profession. I was given the appointment of clinical assistant at this time at the Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary, and was later made junior assistant surgeon. I held the appointment of physician to the Dispensary for one year, but resigned, finding my strength unequal to so much hospital work. Later I applied for the appointment of assistant surgeon at the City Hospital, which appointment I still hold. I have just been appointed one of the assistant surgeons at the Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary. I have reason to be grateful to all the surgeons under whom I have worked, as they have been exceedingly kind to me, and I have been given many opportunities to assist them and have looked after their work during vacations. In 1906 I wrote an article entitled A Time-Saving Addition to Test-Type Cards, which was published in the Archives of Ophthalmology, Vol. 35, and reprinted in German. In March, 1911, an article entitled An Inexpensive Pocket Transilluminator was printed by the Ophthalmic Record. I have just had the honor of being appointed secretary and treasurer of the New England Ophthalmological Society. I have just been appointed an assistant in ophthalmology in the Harvard Graduate School of Medicine. I am a member of the Harvard Club of Boston and the Hunnewell Club of Newton.

Being forced to leave Harvard at the close of my second year, I found myself in the fall of 1896 in the same predicament as thousands of other boys before and since,—groping in the business world for a footing and a livelihood, with no skill or knowledge of value to offer my employer,—with a dim goal labelled “success” and a determination on my part to arrive somehow. My father being a merchant, in a small way, I naturally turned to the same field, and eventually specialized in laces. I gained my knowledge at first hand as stock boy, head of stock and salesman. A long road with many responsibilities but barren of honors. I now have the Boston office and act as selling agent for three foreign lace manufacturers in the New England states and New York.

My old desire to enter the newspaper game a second time (I followed it during my four years at college) caused me to carry newspaper advertising as a side line three years ago, and to-day I find myself with the Cambridge Chronicle, a weekly publi-

A report of myself is difficult for me to make, as my happenings have lain mostly in the minutiae of cares and endeavors in the commedia humanorum that are not on the program and not briefly to be retold. Even before 1898's Commencement I exchanged philosophy and the King's English for the practices and vernacular of the Navy, giving an imitation of a Harvard graduate before the mast and after the Spaniards. My ship, the converted cruiser Prairie, was at first a part of the North Atlantic patrol fleet and later engaged in blockade and scout duties in West Indian waters. Since 1898, except for a trip to Europe in 1900 and a year in Charleston, S. C., in 1908 (thereby missing our Decennial), I have been in New York City, which has always been my home. My summer headquarters are East Hampton, Long Island, N. Y. Starting by 1899 in journalism, for which I had aimed in my college study, I had the usual experiences in newspaper and editorial work for ten years. Of late I have dabbled in civic matters,—hugely enheartened by the birth of the Progressive party, to which most of the really handsome and intelligent 1898 men in New York belong. But up to date there is lack of evidence that I have redeemed the investment in my bringing up by our Alma Mater. I am unmarried,—and I find myself among the bachelors and spinsters of small expansion who seem to form the majority of those interested in eugenics and education. Member: Harvard Club, MacDowell Club, Barrows League, all of New York.

Collegiate exercises winding up in December, 1896, I went "pulley-hauling" round Cape Horn to San Francisco in the ship Challenger, Dudley (1888) being good enough to have an eye to things among the afterguard, as passenger, while I did "the best I knew how" for'ard of the mainmast. We visited

San Francisco a bit, sailing in company. Then I contributed my services to the San Francisco Examiner. In 1898, annoyed because I hadn't enough of a stake to go to the Klondike on spec., I came east overland. I found a wee corner in the American Navy, and saw a moderate-sized part of the comic opera, as staged in Cuba. Enough back pay accrued before I was allowed shore liberty in southern waters to enable me to go to South America to seek my fortune. I found it, and after having returned from Buenos Aires in a lime-juicer, the Tandil, I was gratified in June, 1899 (just one year late), at receiving my A.B. (able seaman's papers) from the British Shipping Federation, at Newport, Monmouthshire. At Commencement I entered upon a career of mercantile pursuits, rising in due time to become night watchman of the Cardiff Workmen's Hotel and exhibitor for the South Wales and Monmouthshire Mutoscope Company, Limited. Need of change caused me in the same year to sign articles in another lemon-pelter sled, the Stanfield. I left her at Galveston, without emolument, or much clothing. Thereafter (with the exception of a brief and profitless mining venture about one hundred and fifty miles northeast of Seattle), I have devoted myself to scribbling. Since 1900 I have acted as hired man with the Boston Globe, New York Tribune, Evening Sun, New York Daily News, New York American, Mail and Express, New York Press, Boston Herald; now and then some magazine stuff inadequately paid for. I hereby decline to be the next dean of Harvard College, just as I felt obliged to decline last spring to accept the billet of skipper in the Pioneer, the craft of the Boy Scouts of America. I have not yet reached, and hope I never shall reach, the unfortunate point of taking myself seriously. I also hope I shan't be anchored in this 'ere province when the bagpipes begin to skirl the graveyard quickstep,—much preferring that those in authority should

“Shovel my bones to Davy Jones,
And my soul to Fiddlers' Green.”

Meantime I scribble still—and sometimes not still. (Free lances, you see, are usually paid by the amount of space they fill.)

To do so seriously would seem too much like a joke. I do not possess the wit to do it in exactly the spirit in which it should be undertaken, and had I the wit I am firmly convinced it could be much more profitably employed.

Since leaving college my life has been of the quiet, simple order; of a private instead of public nature. If one would like to live in a little, old, low-studded, vine-covered farmhouse, where one might smoke his pipe at ease in front of blazing wood fires, and listen by the hour to masterful rendering, by friends, of Liszt, or Chopin, or De Bussy, and other ultra modern composers, or hear discussions of the merits of the latest plays by those who participate in them, then my quiet life might seem interesting to him. Having a personal fondness for old tapestries, antique mirrors, and old handmade furniture, I have had great pleasure in collecting the same in odd places and byways for myself. Finding that the general public prefers modern machine-made furniture and stuffs, I have made it my business to supply them with the same. Interior decorating I find more remunerative than architecture, full of variety, and vastly entertaining. (Second Report.)

The life which I have led for years has been very quiet,— devoted to work during part of each year—and travel in Europe during the remainder.

Ill health, due to a cracked skull, forced me to resign from college shortly after the mid-year examinations in the sophomore year. I did nothing for a year and a half. In the fall of 1897 I got a job with J. A. and W. Bird and Company of Boston. Stayed with them until the spring of 1899, when I went to Biltmore, N. C., and entered the Biltmore Forest School, where I stayed the full course of one year. In April, 1900, went to Germany with the graduating class of the Biltmore Forest School and spent three months studying forestry. Spent three additional months in Germany, Russia, Sweden and England studying forest conditions. Returned to the States in October and spent the winter of 1900-1901 in the employ of the Cornell Forest School at Axton, N. Y., working in the logging woods. In May, 1901, entered the employ of G. W. Vanderbilt on his forest property, near Biltmore, N. C. In February, 1902, got a position with the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture, where I have been ever since. The work has taken me into every state in the Union excepting Florida, and I shall probably have to go there before I get through. Am now looking for a job which will let me stay at home some. The United States Department of Agriculture has published a couple of bulletins written by me on forestry subjects; don't remember their names. Have been too busy working to write for publication. On leaving college, I entered the leather house of Bullivant, Brown and Fiske in Boston, and after being with them a year and a half was sent to Germany as representative of the American Company, leather, with offices at Frankfurt-on-Main. After being there a year I returned to Boston and engaged in the real estate business with my father. When the

HAL SAYRE, JR.

Nome, Alaska, strike was made I went north, and stayed there four summers and one winter. After that I settled in Seattle and organized the firm of Manning, Sawyer and Company, real estate agents. After a year this partnership was dissolved, and I then went to Portland, Ore., and San Francisco on various deals. For the next four years I was in the boot and shoe business in Seattle, but left it two years ago last July for the simple life. So at present, with my partner, M. D. W. Greene, who is also a Boston man, I am a grower of apples at Imbler, Ore., in the Grande Ronde Valley. My only offices are president of the Imbler Commercial Club and secretary of the Imbler Fruitgrowers Union. We have a great apple country here, and it is not unlikely that the reader may see the name of Greene and Sawyer on the next box of apples he buys, as this season we are shipping about fifteen cars to different parts of the country. Hal Sayre, Jr.

Parents	Hal, Elizabeth (Dartt) Sayre.
School	Noble and Greenough's School, Boston, Mass.
Years in College	1894-1898.
Died	Roswell, N. Mex., Feb. 19, 1902.

Hal Sayre, Jr., was accidentally shot and killed at Roswell, N. Mex., February 19, 1902. Sayre was born in Central City, Col., September 22, 1875, the son of Hal and Elizabeth (Dartt) Sayre. He received his early education in a private school in France, in one at Baltimore, Md., in the public schools of Denver, Col., and in the military schools at Peekskill and Sing Sing, N. Y. He entered Harvard from Noble and Greenough's School, Boston, in 1894, and during his college course was elected a member of the Institute of 1770, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Hasty Pudding Club, Signet and O. K. societies, and was an editor of the Advocate. Towards the close of his senior year the Spanish War broke out, and Sayre, together with a few other members of 1898 and 1897, immediately left for the South to join the then forming "Rough Riders." His early training in the military schools proved to be of great assistance to him, and though, to his own deep disappointment, he failed to go to Cuba with the first half of his regiment, the very reason for his being left behind was due to his military efficiency. He was a strict disciplinarian, a splendid officer, and his services were needed in training the remaining troops. After being mustered out Sayre went to Paris to study art, and while there received a commission as second lieutenant in the Fortieth United States Volunteer Regiment. He accepted this commission, and served his two years of enlistment in the Philippines. He returned to this country just before Christmas, 1901, and after spending two weeks in Boston, returned to his home in Denver. At the time of his death he was taking a short vacation preparatory to entering his father's office. He has left behind him a score of friends who cherish the memory of an honorable and manly man.

In the fall of 1910 I made an extensive trip, visiting the principal ports of Canada,

Great Britain, Europe and the United States, with the view of obtaining first-hand information in connection with port facilities and to note the manner of carrying on the works under the various forms of administration. On the 7th of November last I met with a great personal loss in the death of my beloved wife after a long illness of seven and one-half years' duration, suffered with a never failing calmness and the sweetest peace of mind. After leaving Harvard, my work there having been in the nature of post-graduate work in the Architectural School, I took up active work in the architectural line as architects' superintendent. In the fall of 1898 I came to New York City, among other buildings having general charge of the construction of the Hotel Ansonia, at that time the largest hotel of its kind in the world. Since then (1902) I have taken up real estate, having found it more profitable for me (architecture is a rich man's profession), but continue my architectural work in a quiet way on country houses. My club life is confined now to the Tappan Zee Yacht Club (see Webster's Dictionary for flag), and I am its vice-commodore. The position of greatest honor which I have held was that of captain of the Harvard lacrosse team, seasons of 1895-1896, though I have had as many as four hundred men working under my direction since then in the building line. My chief recreation now is yachting, and as one of the officers of the Hudson River Yacht Racing Association I have had the pleasure of meeting a number of Harvard men on the big river from New York to Albany. I will be glad to welcome any Harvard men, particularly of 1898, cruising on Tappan Zee Bay, at the bungalow near the yacht club on the west shore, just south of Nyack.

I think a word of explanation may be necessary to explain why I received the degree of Bachelor of Laws in 1897 and am included among the members of the Class of 1898. I passed my examination for admission to Harvard College and entered college with the Class of 1898 in the fall of 1894. I had already, however, taken my examination for admission to the Law School, and upon receiving word that I had passed these examinations, entered the Law School. I finished my three years in the Law School in 1897. My degree was not conferred until 1898 because I was not twenty-one years of age. I was admitted to practice in Massachusetts in 1898, and became associated with the firm of Long and Hemenway, of which the Hon. John D. Long was the senior member and Alfred Hemenway the junior. I remained with them for some years, and then took up practice on my own account. I have specialized to some extent in conveyancing and probate law. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Boston, Corinthian Yacht Club, Abstract Club, Airedale Terrier Club of America, Airedale Terrier Club of New England, Irish Terrier Club of America, American Fox Terrier Club.

In the fall of 1908 I entered the office of Stackpole and Gay, bankers and brokers, and was employed there in various capacities until the fall of 1902, when I moved to New York, and entered the employ of W. O. Gay and Company, dealers in commercial paper and notes. In January, 1903, I took charge of the bond department of King, Hodenpyl and Company's New York office. In 1905 Mr. John C. King and Mr. Hodenpyl separated, and I associated myself with the former, who formed a firm under the name of John C. King and Company. Mr. King retired from business in January, 1907, and I made my offices with the firm of H. C. Brown and Company, 49 Wall Street, where I remained until September, 1908, when I purchased a membership on the New York Stock Exchange. I have been actively employed there ever since. At present I am making my headquarters at the offices of Messrs. Hayden, Stone and Company, 25 Broad Street, New York, and am so fortunate as to have charge of their stock business on the floor of the Stock Exchange. I am always in the Exchange between the hours of 10 A. M. and 3 P. M., and would be very happy to greet any of my former classmates there, should they find leisure to drop in to see me. STUART WADSWORTH WHEELER

Being compelled to leave college on account of my health, and physicians advising California, I naturally went there, and spent two years in the southern part of that state tutoring, packing oranges, and obtaining experience and adventure, especially the latter. My requests for funds were quite frequent, and my paternal adviser and provider strongly suggested that I turn eastward. I did. After returning to my native city I accepted a position with the Merchants Bank, and was with this institution nearly four years. My father then asked me to join him. This was my one best opportunity, and in 1904 I was elected secretary of the corporation. In 1905 I was married to Miss Rita Meyer, of St. Paul, Minn. We have two boys, who no doubt will follow their father's footsteps only as far as going to Harvard is concerned, as Mrs. Westheimer has ideas of her own regarding the rearing of boys; but I agree with Mr. Shakespeare,—“Murder will out.” Member: Althea Club of St. Joseph, Lotus Club of St. Joseph, Harvard Club of Kansas City.

I was a real estate specialist for ten years in New York, and am still president of the J. P. Whiton-Stuart Company, New York, where I saved enough to buy a herd of cattle in Arizona. After leaving college I went to the South, where I lived on a plantation for a while. On my return North I started in to learn the worsted yarn trade at the Edgeworth Spinning Mills in Worcester. I worked mill hours, 6:45 A. M. to 6:15 P. M., with an hour for dinner and Saturday afternoons off, and I can tell you it was some change from the days when a man thought he was overworked if he had more than four recitations a day. After spending about a year in the spinning mills, I went into the Whittall Carpet Mills, and am now general manager and assistant treasurer of these mills. I was married in February, 1900, to Betsey Whitin, and we have three children,—two boys and a girl. One of the boys is at the Woodland School at Phœnicia, N. Y., and the other at the Fay School, Southboro, Mass. It is hardly necessary to say that they are preparing for preparatory schools, from which the majority of the graduating class find their way to Cambridge.

After leaving college I spent nearly a year resting and recuperating from my labors, and then took a position as engineer with a large slate manufacturing company in my home town, expecting this to be only temporary. Without much thought for the future, I worked away here for a couple of years when certain overtures from a person of the opposite sex decided me in the idea that the city was the place for me, and I spent several months looking over Boston and New York for a position where I could make the largest amount of money for the least amount of work. After answering innumerable advertisements and walking hundreds of miles in interviewing prospective employers, I was forced to take a very small salary in an electric supply company. My female inspiration failing me about this time owing to my lack of success in securing a good paying job, I accepted a position with the General Electric Company of Lynn as draughtsman, where I remained until the spring of 1905. During this time I married (not my other love) and spent the years of 1905-1907 at Pittsfield, Mass., as draughtsman and designer. Tired of mechanical work, I went back home to Maine in 1907 and hired a farm, where I put in three very pleasant but not especially productive years. In 1910 I returned to the General Electric Company at Lynn, Mass., where I am still located and doing fairly well. I have held no positions of honor or trust except during the years when I was farming down in Maine. There I was town clerk for three years, selectman, assessor and overseer of the poor for one year, town treasurer for two years, and superintendent of schools for one year.

Address	Williamsville (Erie County), N. Y.

Upon leaving the University on March 4, 1898 (having caught the war fever, and enlisted in Battery A, First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery), I spent my first six months doing shore duty at various points on the Massachusetts coast, until November 10 of that year, when we were mustered out of the United States service. Returning home, I entered the manufacturing business, beginning at the bottom, and doing shop work in one of the bicycle factories here in Buffalo, working my way up through various departments for the next six months or so, until the firm changed hands, when I went with the International Railway Company, in their car designing department, in which position I stayed for, approximately, a year and a half. I was then offered a position as one of the engineers of aerial construction of the Bell Telephone Company of Buffalo. After leaving the Telephone Company, I went into partnership with a friend selling and erecting structural steel. After a year or so in this business, we discovered that one office was not large enough for two men, the two men being ourselves, and decided to separate. About this time I had designed a ventilating window lock, and so started in the sheet metal stamping business, in order to be in a position to make this lock and a couple of other patents which I had obtained control of. Being a small concern, we worried along and passed through the small panic of 1907 with a few minor scars, and the next spring sold out the business, —that is, the manufacturing end of it. About this time, our family (for in the meantime I had married, and we have two growing youngsters) decided that the phrase “back to the farm” would suit us immensely, and we began looking around for some place near Buffalo. About a year and a half ago we finally found one that we thought suited our needs to perfection, and consequently bought it. Last year we spent in building our house, into which we moved shortly after the first of January this year, and I am now quite busy in bringing up a few thousand young chickens, together with overseeing the farming end of the plant, which furnishes food to supply the rapidly growing feathered family.
